Technical Change And Industrial Policy:

Technological Change and Industrial Transformation Vicky Xiaoyan Long, Magnus Holmén, 2021-08-18 Industrial transformation is a research and teaching field with a focus on the phenomenon and mechanisms of industrial development and renewal. It concerns changes in economic activities caused by innovation, competition and collaboration and has a rich heritage of evolutionary economics, institutional economics, industrial dynamics, technology history and innovation studies. It borrows concepts and models from the social sciences, sociology, history, political sciences, business management, economics, behavioural sciences and also from technology and engineering studies. In this book the authors present the key theories, frameworks and concepts of industrial transformation and use empirical cases to describe and explain the causes, processes and outcomes of transformation in the context of digitalization and sustainability. They stress that industrial transformation consists both of Darwinian survival of the fittest, selection and of intentional pursuits of innovation and of industrial capabilities creation. The work argues that managing the global trends of transformation is not only about new technology and innovation, existing institutional settings and dynamic interactions between technological change, organizational adaptation and economic activities also have a profound impact on future trajectories. The areas under investigation are of great relevance for strategic management decisions and industrial and technology policies and understanding the mechanisms underlying transformation and sustainable growth.

Is Skill-biased Technological Change Here Yet? Eli Berman, Rohini Somanathan, Hong W. Tan, 2005 Most high and middle income countries showed symptoms of skill biased technological change in the 1980s India a low income country did not perhaps because India's traditionally controlled economy may have limited the transfer of technologies from abroad However the economy underwent a sharp reform and a manufacturing boom in the 1990s raising the possibility that technology absorption may have accelerated during the past decade The authors investigate the hypothesis that skill biased technological change did in fact arrive in India in the 1990s using panel data disaggregated by industry and state from the Annual Survey of Industry These data confirm that while the 1980s were a period of falling skills demand the 1990s showed generally rising demand for skills with variation across states They find that increased output and capital skill complementarity appear to be the best explanations of skill upgrading in the 1990s Skill upgrading did not occur in the same set of industries in India as it did in other countries suggesting that increased demand for skills in Indian manufacturing is not due to the international diffusion of recent vintages of skill biased technologies
