Timurids in Transition Maria Subtelny, 2007-08-30 How did the the descendants of Tamerlane collectively known as the Timurids make the transition from a nomadic empire to a sedentary polity based on the Perso-Islamic model and what effect did the process of transition have on their Turko-Mongolian customs and identity This volume seeks to answer these questions by utilizing the Weberian concepts of the routinization of charismatic authority and the patrimonial household state

Focusing on the period of the last Timurid ruler Sul n usain Bayqara 1469 1506 the author examines the impact of the introduction of Persian modes of bureaucratic administration on the evolution of Timurid government and describes the development of the agrarian economy of the eastern Iranian province of Khorasan through the Islamic institution of the pious endowment Based on an exceptionally broad range of sources in Persian Arabic and Turkic languages the book provides a new paradigm for understanding the Timurids within the framework of post Mongol history and offers fresh insights into Turko Persian relations and the problem of acculturation in medieval Iran Robbing Yadullah's water to irrigate Saeid's garden: Hydrology and water rights in a village of Central Iran Molle, François, Mamanpoush, A., Miranzadeh, M.,2004 This report provides a case study from the province of Esfahan in central Iran describing the struggle of a village to secure the water resources without which local agriculture and altogether life in the village would be impossible It illustrates the endless ingenuity of farmers in their quest for water how land and water rights have developed how various legal repertoires may conflict with one another and how the intervention of the state transformed the wider hydrological cycle of the valley and affected the delicate equilibrium between population and resources that had prevailed until then The report estimates the costs of accessing one cubic meter from each of these different sources and shows how political interventions or drought mitigation policies elicit solutions that are extremely costly Traditional Crafts in Qajar Iran (1800-1925) Willem M.

Floor,2003 Capitalisms Kaveh Yazdani,Dilip M. Menon,2020-01-02 Conventional accounts often conceive the genesis of capitalism in Europe within the conjunctures of agricultural commercial and industrial revolutions Challenging this widely believed cliché this volume traces the history of capitalism across civilizations tenth century onwards and argues that capitalism was neither a monolithic entity nor exclusively an economic phenomenon confined to the West Looking at regions as diverse as England South America Russia North Africa and East South West and Southeast Asia the book explores the plurality of developments across time and space The chapters analyse aspects such as historical conjunctures commodity production and distribution circulation of knowledge and personnel and the role of mercantile capital small producers and force all the while stressing the necessity to think beyond present day national boundaries The book argues that the multiple histories of capitalism can be better understood from a trans regional intercontinental and interconnected perspective

Floor,2003 Agriculture was the mainstay of Iran s economy in the nineteenth century yet little is known about it Historians have rarely taken that important reality into account when writing on the economic or social history of that period and until now there have been no comprehensive studies of Iranian agriculture Now in Agriculture in Qajar Iran renowned scholar Willem Floor has compiled an all encompassing analysis of nineteenth century Iranian agriculture based on extensive research into previously untapped Persian and European archives Floor presents farming in Iran from the ground up and in its every dimension His investigation covers farming methods like irrigation and seeding the raising of livestock and the range of crops cultivated from wheat barley and rice to the more notorious cash crops of tobacco and opium Floor also delves into methods of forestry and fishing subjects about which very little is known and even less has been written until now Agriculture in Qajar Iran traces the commercialisation of Iranian farming and explains how this process altered the structure of Iran's economy The change included the rise in cash crops the growth of wage labor the rise in off farm employment and the market economy's growing influence in the countryside Floor also highlights the importance of trade within this burgeoning system and gauges the impact of the commercialisation of agriculture on the rural population's socioeconomic status
