Wolff-Michael Roth, 2006-01-01 How do you intend to learn know see something that you do not yet know Given the theory laden nature of perception how do you perceive something in a science demonstration that requires knowing the very theory that you are to learn In this book the author provides answers to these and other intractable problems of learning in science He uses both first person phenomenological methods critically analyzing his own experiences of learning in unfamiliar situations and third person ethnographic methods critically analyzing the learning of students involved in hands on investigations concerning motion and static electricity Roth continues his longstanding interest in understanding how we learn science and the question why all the changes to science education made over the past five decades have a significant impact of increasing understanding and interest in the subject Roth articulates in his concluding chapter that the problem lies in part with the theories of learning employed in the course of his biographical experience he has appropriated and abandoned numerous theoretical frameworks including radical social constructivism because they fell short when it came to understand real time processes in school science classrooms This book which employs the cognitive phenomenological method described in the recently published Doing Qualitative Research Praxis of Method Sense Publishers 2005 has been written for all those who are interested in learning science undergraduate students preparing for a career in science teaching graduate students interested in the problems of teaching and learning of science and faculty members researching and teaching in science education

Learning to Teach in England and the United States Maria Teresa Tatto,Katharine Burn,Ian Menter,Trevor Mutton,Ian Thompson,2017-11-28 Learning to Teach in England and the United States studies the evolution of initial teacher education by considering some of the current approaches in England and the United States Presenting empirical evidence from these two distinct political and historical contexts the chapters of this thought provoking volume illustrate the tensions involved in preparing teachers who are working in ever changing environments Grounded in the lived experiences of those directly affected by these shifting policy environments the book questions if reforms that have introduced accountability regimes and new kinds of partnership with the promise of improving teaching and learning have contributed to more powerful learning experiences in schools for those entering the profession The authors consider the relationships between global national and local policy and question their potential impact on the future of teacher education and teaching more generally The research adopts an innovative methodology and sociocultural theoretical framework designed to show greater insights into the ways in which beginning teachers learning experiences are shaped by relationships at all of these levels A key emerging issue is that of the alignment or not between the values and dispositions of the individuals and the institutions that are involved This book will appeal to academics researchers and postgraduate students in the fields of teacher education comparative education higher education and education policy and politics
