Teaching of History Hilary Cooper, Jon Nichol, 2015-10-13 History Education is a politically contested subject It can be used to both promote xenophobia and to develop critical thinking multiple perspectives and tolerance Accordingly this book critically examines complex issues and constructivist approaches that make history relevant to students understanding of the modern world As such it has global appeal especially in North and South America Canada Europe and Asia The book's authors address the major challenges that History Education faces in an era of globalisation digital revolution and international terror nationalism and sectarian and religious conflict and warfare Central to this volume are controversial issues trauma and questions of personal and national identity from a wide range of international settings and perspectives The research in this book was undertaken by leading history educators from every continent Their interdisciplinary research represents an important contribution to the teaching of social sciences social psychology civic education programmes history and history education in schools colleges and universities The book offers new approaches to history educators at all levels In addition the chapters offer potential as required reading for students to both develop an international perspective and to compare and contrast their own situations with those that the book covers Section I considers issues related to identity how can history education promote social coherence in multicultural societies in societies divided by sectarianism or countries adapting to regime changes whether Communist or Fascist including for example South Africa previously Communist countries of Eastern Europe and previous dictatorships in South America and Western Europe It discusses such questions as How important is it that students learn the content of history through the processes of historical enquiry What should that content be and who should decide it educators or politicians What is the role of textbooks and who should write and select them Should history be taught as a discrete discipline or as part of a citizenship or social sciences curriculum Sections II and III explore ways in which memory of sensitive issues related to the past to war or to massacres may be addressed Are there new methodologies or approaches which make this possible How can students understand situations involving intolerance and injustice

Using IT in Primary School History Lez Smart, 1996-01-11 The UK National Curriculum requires children to develop an IT capability through the different subject areas This book for non IT specialists aims to help humanities teachers use IT to enhance and facilitate children s learning The author considers how children s historical and geographical knowledge skills and understanding can be better developed through use of IT and how their IT capability can be developed in this context

Pinning Down the Past Mike Corbishley, 2014-04-17 In a relatively short period of time the pursuit of archaeology has evolved from an antiquarian interest to a specialised scientific activity Part of this evolution has always included the interest of the public and archaeologists efforts to educate them As each new method and technique is developed and each new specialism is created the challenge of making archaeology available as a learning resource grows with it Today for example the issues which surround archaeology and heritage such as the pressures of tourism on sites now form part of many formal educational curricula This book the first to deal with the subject in such depth examines the place of education and outreach within the wider archaeological community Written by one of Britain s leading archaeological educationalists it charts the sometimes difficult and painful growth and development of education and archaeology Packed full of informative and enlightening case studies from the circus at Colchester to Sutton Hoo and Hadrian s Wall this work examines exactly how we have reached the point we are at where that place is and suggests areas for future development By drawing upon many decades of experience at the front line of archaeological education the author has produced a key text that will play a major role in the on going development of the heritage industry Publisher s website
