Teaching African American History:

Teaching African-American History Robert L. Harris, 2001 Teaching Black History to White People Leonard N. Moore, 2021-09-14 Leonard Moore has been teaching Black history for twenty five years mostly to white people Drawing on decades of experience in the classroom and on college campuses throughout the South as well as on his own personal history Moore illustrates how an understanding of Black history is necessary for everyone With Teaching Black History to White People which is part memoir part Black history part pedagogy and part how to guide Moore delivers an accessible and engaging primer on the Black experience in America He poses provocative questions such as Why is the teaching of Black history so controversial and What came first slavery or racism These questions don t have easy answers and Moore insists that embracing discomfort is necessary for engaging in open and honest conversations about race Moore includes a syllabus and other tools for actionable steps that white people can take to move beyond performative justice and toward racial reparations healing and reconciliation Teaching African and African American History In the Home, School, and Community Dr. Eva M. Doyle, 2023-11-13 The book My Journey of 45 Years Teaching African American History in the Home School and Community traces the author s life as an Educator Historian and Community Activist with the goal of sharing little known facts about the contributions of African Americans to our nation and the world Much of this history has been excluded from many textbooks The readers will find this book to be biographical informative and historical The places events community projects and people featured here have contributed to a life long journey of research and writing It is the hope of this writer that this book will be used not only as a resource to learn more about the contributions of African Americans but as an incentive for readers to share their talents knowledge and creativity to make a difference in the world This is the 13th book in the Eye on History Series of publications designed to educate and inform readers on a variety of topics For more information go to www.evamdoyle.com Teaching African and African American History In the Home, School, and Community Eva M. understanding and analyzing African American history the 20th century African American historical enterprise and the teaching of African American history for the 21st century Reading, Interpreting, and Teaching African American History LaGarrett Jarriel King, 2012 African American history and how it is taught in classroom spaces have been a point of contention with activists historians and educators for decades In its current form African American history narratives often are ambiguous and truncated leaving students with a disjointed construction about U S history Additionally the pedagogical decisions made by teachers regarding African American history are sometimes problematic To fix this problem critical scholars have surmised that both pre and in service teachers need to be more knowledgeable about African American history This knowledge will help teachers move past simplistic constructions of the past and provide a transformative educational experience In essence these scholars believe that teachers cannot teach African American history because they do not know it This study however examines what if they do know African American history will they teach it The purpose of this study was to investigate how knowledge influences teachers pedagogical decisions Using the theoretical and conceptual frameworks of cultural memory and knowledge construction this qualitative case study explores how four pre service teachers interpreted African American history after engaging in a summer reading program and how that knowledge was implemented in their classroom during their student teaching semester The reader entitled A Winding River was a collection of scholarly journal articles book chapters and primary and secondary source documents Data collection measures included three classroom observations reflective journals three interviews and other classroom documents related to the participant s student teaching experience Findings indicate that knowledge acquisition is complex and the process to teach is a generative process Although knowledge is an important component in teaching sociocultural factors also influenced the divergent ways African American history was interpreted and taught The study indicates that the access of African American history is not always a prerequisite in teaching the subject in transformative ways Self-Taught Heather Andrea Williams, 2009-06-03

Teaching African American History as a Component of Multiethnic Education Through Colonial Williamsburg Brian L. Johnson, 1991 Hearing their Voices Kay Traille, 2019-12-25 This book is about what teachers need to know before they teach history to students of color It is a book about the inside feel of these students and what they think and say history is for based on research in the United States with reflections on the United Kingdom It gives history teachers a better understanding of why culturally relevant pedagogy inclusion and issues surrounding diversity are of crucial importance if we are to reach these students We live in a world where many multicultural students think they have little connection with the histories traditions and values in which they have grown up some look toward groups who promise them a sense of belonging and ownership of created histories which clash with and threaten democratic societies This book begins with the belief that it is important to understand how a subject history makes non White students think and feel about themselves At its center are assertions made by students of color who think learning history that is rich in aspects they can connect with culturally and personally is important and necessary in gaining and holding their attention Then I make suggestions of how we best communicate and set high expectations for these students how as history teachers we use strategies to better engage these students and redirect the unengaged We need to make sure history educators provide necessary and appropriate scaffolding for students of colour to better process what they learn in history lessons making sure they are engaged in higher order thinking in an equitable safe environment where they see and know that their diversities are respected and valued

Interpreting African American History and Culture at Museums and Historic Sites

Max A. van Balgooy,2014-12-24 In this landmark guide nearly two dozen essays by scholars educators and museum leaders suggest the next steps in the interpretation of African American history and culture from the colonial period to the twentieth century at history museums and historic sites This diverse anthology addresses both historical research and interpretive methodologies including investigating church and legal records using social media navigating sensitive or difficult topics preserving historic places engaging students and communities and strengthening connections between local and national history Case studies of exhibitions tours and school programs from around the country provide practical inspiration including photographs of projects and examples of exhibit label text Highlights include Amanda Seymour discusses the prevalence of false nostalgia at the homes of the first five presidents and offers practical solutions to create a more inclusive nuanced history Dr Bernard Powers reveals that African American church records are a rich but often overlooked source for developing a more complete portrayal of individuals and communities Dr David Young executive director of Cliveden uses his experience in reinterpreting this National Historic Landmark to identify four ways that people respond to a history that has been too often untold ignored or appropriated and how museums and historic sites can constructively respond Dr Matthew Pinsker explains that historic sites may be missing a huge opportunity in telling the story of freedom and emancipation by focusing on the underground railroad rather than its much bigger upper ground counterpart Martha Katz Hyman tackles the challenges of interpreting the material culture of both enslaved and free African Americans in the years before the Civil War by discussing the furnishing of period rooms Dr Benjamin Filene describes three micro public history projects that lead to new ways of understanding the past handling source limitations building partnerships and reaching audiences Andrea Jones shares her approach for engaging students through historical simulations based on the Fight for Your Rights school program at the Atlanta History Center A exhibit on African American Vietnam War veterans at the Heinz History Center not only linked local and international events but became an award winning model of civic engagement A collaboration between a university and museum that began as a local history project interpreting the Scottsboro Boys Trial as a website and brochure ended up changing Alabama law A list of national organizations and an extensive bibliography on the interpretation of African American history provide convenient gateways to additional resources

Teaching the American Civil Rights Movement Julie Buckner Armstrong, 2002 The past fifteen years have seen renewed interest in the civil rights movement Television documentaries films and books have brought the struggles into our homes and classrooms once again New evidence in older criminal cases demands that the judicial system reconsider the accuracy of investigations and legal decisions Racial profiling affirmative action voting districting and school voucher programs keep civil rights on the front burner in the political arena In light of this there are very few resources for teaching the civil rights at the university level This timely and invaluable book fills this gap This book offers perspectives on presenting the movement in different classroom contexts strategies to make the movement come alive for students and issues highlighting topics that students will find appealing Including sample syllabi and detailed descriptions from courses that prove effective this work will be useful for all instructors both college and upper level high school for courses in history education race sociology literature and political science
