systems It has often been the case that these boundaries have had to be reshaped and sometimes abolished

Cooperatives, the State, and Corporate Power in African Export Agriculture Karin Wedig, 2019-02-22 Agriculture is a major contributor to Africa's GDP the region's biggest source of employment and its largest food producer However agricultural productivity remains low and buyer driven global value chains offer few opportunities for small producers to upgrade into higher value added activities In recent years the revival of Africa's cooperatives has been celebrated by governments and international donors as a pathway towards inclusive agricultural development and this book explores the strengths but also the issues which surround these cooperatives The book scrutinizes the neoliberal ideal of economic prosperity arising through the operation of liberalized labor markets by illuminating the discriminatory nature of Uganda's informal labor relations It points to the role of cooperatives as a potential instrument of progressive change in African export agriculture where large numbers of small producers depend on casual wage work in addition to farming In contrast to the portrayal advanced by some governments and rarely questioned by donors of an unproblematic co-existence of small producers collective action and big capital interests the author calls for a re-politicized debate on the Social and Solidarity Economy As part of this she highlights the adverse political and economic conditions faced by African cooperatives including intense international competition in agricultural processing inadequate access to infrastructure and services and at times antagonistic state cooperative relations Supported by wide ranging interdisciplinary evidence including new ethnographic survey and interview data this book shows how cooperatives may be co-opted by both the state and corporations in a discourse that ignores structural inequalities in value chains and emphasizes poverty reduction over economic and political empowerment It provides a critique of New Institutional Economics as a framework for understanding how institutions shape redistribution and develops a political economy approach to explore the conditions for structural change in African export agriculture

India Social Development Report 2023 Indira Hirway, 2024-01-20 This report highlights that gender inequalities and women s subordination in India are caused by two formidable macro structures patriarchy and the exclusion of unpaid work from the macro economy Both these structures reinforce each other and negatively impact women s empowerment Patriarchy imposes subordination on women and forces a disproportionately higher share of unpaid domestic services and unpaid care onto them This is unfair and unjust a violation of basic human rights Other structures like race religion and caste cut across these main structures The selected papers in this report show how patriarchy causes gender inequalities in all critical dimensions of women s life on the one hand and how unpaid domestic services and unpaid care sustains the macro economy and its growth on the other The contributors discuss pathways to integrate unpaid work with the macro economy such that the strength of patriarchy declines and at the same time gender equality is promoted To put it differently unless the structures are addressed by integrating unpaid work inequalities cannot be addressed effectively The report emphasizes that this is the only way to move to real macroeconomics The papers have explored pathways to break these structures gradually to achieve gender equality and empower women Though the path is challenging it is feasible to reach the goal of pervasive gender equality

Anna Grandori's introductory and concluding chapters are not only excellent audits of the current state of our knowledge in this field but they also give a strong sense of direction for the possible futures of the discipline. Anna Grandori is not afraid to face head on some of the more philosophical issues relating to organization as an object of study and is to be commended for doing so. The economics of organization is a new exciting and developing field and the essays in this book will help to shape the research agenda that will take this emergent discipline to its next stage. Peter M Jackson, University of Leicester, UK. This sweeping comprehensive volume is a signal effort in building bridges between economics and organization theory. With a stellar cast of contributors it will both inspire and provoke scholars with its grand ambitions and generate considerable attention and debate. A remarkable effort by Anna Grandori. Walter W Powell, Stanford University, US. Anna Grandori has astutely organized the commissioned chapters of an intellectually diverse set of scholars into an absolutely outstanding contribution that both defines the current state of organizational economics and points the perceptive reader toward an exciting intellectual future. From traditional research areas to the newest topics of interest, the chapters chart the current boundaries of the field. The chapters are filled with gems of insight across several distinct levels of analysis, whether it is a discussion of organizational design or psychological economics or innovation or the organization as language. The discussions are contemporary, comprehensive and challenging. No serious scholar of organizational economics should be without this book. Richard N Osborn, Wayne State University, US. This comprehensive and groundbreaking Handbook integrates economic and organization theories to help elucidate the design and evolution of economic organization. Economic organization is regarded both as a subject of inquiry and as an emerging disciplinary field in its own right, integrating insights from economics, organization theory, strategy and management, economic sociology and cognitive psychology. The contributors who share this integrated approach are distinguished scholars at the productive peak in their fields. Each original state-of-the-art chapter not only addresses foundational issues but also identifies key issues for future research. This original and wide-ranging Handbook will be a useful and thought-provoking read for academics, students and researchers in the fields of organization management and economics.

Ritchie, 2016-03-02 George Bernard Shaw once said that reasonable people adapt themselves to the world but unreasonable people adapt the world to themselves In a sense this book explores how these so called unreasonable people may interact to re fashion the world around them in fragile economic development Drawing on empirical research in the volatile and traditional context of Afghanistan the study investigates the challenge of poor women's participation in business and diverse outcomes for local development Institutional Innovation and Change in Value Chain Development takes a unique look at nuanced institutional phenomena through the lens of social institutions with a subtle appreciation of the interaction of structure and agency Drawing on in depth qualitative research in Afghanistan the case studies specifically investigate the transformation of the women's norm of purdah and the subsequent development of new market institutions in three women's enterprises Shedding new light on the opaque process of institutional change the research shows that external actors such as NGOs can both initiate and guide institutional development in fragile environments Yet there may be limitations to their endeavours with strong resistance from local power holders Meanwhile dominant entrepreneurs are shown to play a major role in fostering institutional development pathways This influences the scope of inclusion and exclusion in enterprise and value chains and broader streams of socio economic development The New Institutionalism in Sociology Mary C.
