Fashion and the City Vincent Pandolfi,2015-03-16 The field of culture is increasingly seen as a strategic asset in for a balanced development of cities Recent research however seems to point to a limited recognition of this potential in local policy making culture becoming increasingly linked to aims of economic repositioning But which aims are exactly involved here Are we indeed facing a new dominant and unilateral approach to culture in Western European cities leaving the full development potential of the field unexplored And why might this be the case Through case studies of fashion in Antwerp Milan and Amsterdam the changing strategising of culture in local development since the 1980s is linked to the search for new governing arrangements between public and private cultural actors within the cities On the basis of this analysis a plea is made for a new and more integrated approach to culture in Western European cities pointing to the significant challenge of experimenting with new and more inclusive forms of public private policy making in support of this agenda for a critical look at the housing program behind it By exploring the relationship between inclusionary housing new build gentrification and austerity urbanism this book highlights the complexity of the planning process and the ambivalences and interdependencies of the actors involved Thereby it provides evidence that the provision of affordable housing or social mixing through this program has only limited success and above all that it promotes in a sense through the back door the very gentrification and displacement mechanisms it is supposed to counteract This book will be of interest to researchers and students of housing studies planning and urban sociology as well as planners and policymakers who are interested in the consequences of their own housing programs
