

Writing in Social Work Education – Annotated Bibliography

Heron, G. & Murray, R. (2004). The place of writing in social work: Bridging the theory-practice divide. Journal of Social Work, 4(2), 199-214.

While social work practitioners have not traditionally sought publication in scholarly journals, the authors argue that their experience working with clients can inform both policy and practice. Many practitioners are resistant towards scholarly writing and publishing due to a lack of confidence, limited time or the feeling that it is not meaningful work.

To encourage practitioners to write for scholarly journals, issues of identity must be addressed. Practitioners that assume a researcher aspect to their identity will be more likely to engage in scholarly pursuits. Social work research tends to be dominated by academia; to incorporate practitioners in the field requires a substantial shift in thinking about research and writing for publication. While leaving practice for academia may very well result in greater scholarly production for any individual, it also represents a shift in the writing context and potentially the values of the individual and the quality of the writing.

The authors move on to explore institutional barriers to writing for publication for practitioners working with children in residential care settings. A lack of power and opportunity may stifle residential care staffs' potential for writing. Encouraging writing for practitioners in social work education programs and encouraging journals' to be more receptive to practitioners may increase the emphasis practitioners' place on writing in the long-term.

Horton, E.G. & Diaz, N. (2011). Learning to write and writing to learn social work concepts: Application of writing across the curriculum strategies and techniques to a course for undergraduate social work students. Journal of Teaching in Social Work, 31(1), 53-64.

Students entering a social work education program often have life experiences and a commitment to helping vulnerable populations that uniquely qualifies them to work with clients. However, they may not have the writing skills necessary to clearly articulate case plans which can be detrimental to their clients' futures. Clear case plans
