Structures, Aging, and Self-Regulation in the Elderly K. Warner Schaie, PhD, Laura L. Carstensen, PhD, 2006-07-06 This collection considers ways in which societal contexts influence aging by influencing self regulatory processes No one doubts that the social contexts in which individuals develop exert strong influence on life trajectories Those born into environments that provide high quality education supportive social relations and economic assets do better in old age than those born into environments bereft of such resources The extent of this influence however is only beginning to be revealed Recent research shows that life experiences influence basic brain structures e g the effect of musical training on neural organization and functions e g inflammatory processes and that social embeddedness may even protect against Alzheimer s disease Similarly education increasingly appears to have a real effect on neural integrity Thus societal contexts may not simply open or close doors for individuals but may influence self regulatory processes at the most basic levels of functioning Although social structures are generally seen as the independent variables that affect individual aging it is also possible to think of a lifetime development of self regulatory processes leading to behaviors in old age that can have impact on and modify societal structures Two parts of this book consider self regulation as the dependent variable asking how social contexts influence cognitive emotional and self regulatory processes The third part reverses the question treating self regulation as the independent variable and retirement and physical health as dependent variables In this part consideration is given to how the effectiveness of self regulation influences physical and economic outcomes in old age Handbook of Models for Human Aging P. Michael Conn, 2011-04-28 The Handbook of Models for Human Aging is designed as the only comprehensive work available that covers the diversity of aging models currently available For each animal model it presents key aspects of biology nutrition factors affecting life span methods of age determination use in research and disadvantages advantages of use Chapters on comparative models take a broad sweep of age related diseases from Alzheimer s to joint disease cataracts cancer and obesity In addition there is an historical overview and discussion of model availability key methods and ethical issues Utilizes a multidisciplinary approach Shows tricks and approaches not available in primary publications First volume of its kind to combine both methods of study for human aging and animal models Over 200 illustrations Positive Aging and Precarity Irina Catrinel Crăciun, 2019-05-10 This book explores positive aging through the lens of precarity aiming to ground positive aging theories in current social contexts In recent years research on aging has been branded by growing disagreements between supporters of the successful aging model and critical gerontologists who highlight the widening inequalities disadvantages and precarity that characterize old age This book comes to fill a gap in knowledge by offering an alternative view on positive aging informed by precarity and its impact on projections concerning aging The first part of the book places aging in broader theoretical and empirical context exploring the complex links between views on aging successful aging theories policy and social reality The second part uses results from a qualitative research conducted in Germany to illustrate the dissonance between successful aging ideals and both negative and positive views on aging as well as aging preparation strategies inspired by precarity Findings from this section provide a solid starting point for comparisons with countries that are both similar and different from Germany in terms of welfare regimes and aging policies The final part of the book discusses the psychological implications of these findings within and beyond the German case study and outlines potential solutions for practice This book provides health psychologists gerontologists sociologists social workers health professionals as well as students and aging individuals themselves with better understanding of the meaning of aging in precarious times and builds confidence about aging well despite precarity
