Medical Women and Victorian Fiction Kristine Swenson explores the cultural intersections of fiction feminism and medicine during the second half of the nineteenth century in Britain and her colonies by looking at the complex and reciprocal relationship between women and medicine in Victorian culture Her examination centers around two distinct though related figures the Nightingale nurse and the New Woman doctor The medical women in the fiction of Elizabeth Gaskell Ruth Wilkie Collins The Woman in White Dr Margaret Todd Mona McLean Medical Student Hilda Gregg Peace with Honour and others are analyzed in relation to nonfictional discussions of nurses and women doctors in medical publications nursing tracts feminist histories and newspapers Victorian anxieties over sexuality disease and moral corruption came together most persistently around the figure of a prostitute However Swenson takes as her focus for this volume an opposing figure the medical woman whom Victorians deployed to combat these social ills As symbols of traditional female morality informed and transformed by the new social and medical sciences representations of medical women influenced public debate surrounding women s education and employment the Contagious Diseases Acts and the health of the empire At the same time the presence of these educated independent women who received payment for performing tasks traditionally assigned to domestic women or servants inevitably altered the meaning of womanhood and the positions of other women in Victorian culture Swenson challenges more conventional histories of the rise of the actual nurse and the woman doctor by treating as equally important the development of cultural representations of these figures

A Painful Inch to Gain Eileen Crofton, 2014-02-05 The battles that women had to fight to enter the medical profession have been well documented by historians A Painful Inch to Gain takes a more personal approach focusing on the stories of individual women medical students Drawing as far as possible on their own words Eileen Crofton who herself qualified as a doctor during the Second World War looks at what made these young women want to pursue a career in medicine in the first place They knew they faced considerable obstacles In the face of male hostility how could they ensure that they got as thorough a medical training as the men And how could they pay for this training let alone feed and clothe themselves With no role models how were they to conduct themselves What should they wear How were they to balance the demands of their profession with their expectations of love and marriage Finally having qualified as doctors what was to be their role in their chosen profession
