The Heritage Of The Bounty:

The Heritage of the Bounty Harry Lionel Shapiro, 1962 The Heritage of the Bounty H. L. Shapiro, 1982-01-01 The Heritage of the Bounty Harry Lionel Shapiro, 1936 The heritage of the bounty, by h.l. shapiro H. l Shapiro, 1936 The Myth of the Natural Laboratory Adrian Young, 2025-12-31

Outsiders have construed Pitcairn and Norfolk Islands as isolated natural laboratories since the nineteenth century. The islands' inhabitants descended from the eighteenth-century mutineers of the British naval vessel Bounty and their partners from Tahiti: Tubuai, Huahine, and Raiatea. They have long been idealized by investigators as incomparable research subjects uniquely suited for the study of racial, cultural, and linguistic hybridity. But how did these two Pacific islands come to be seen as natural experiments in the first place? How was that idea shaped and contested in encounters between knowledge makers and the people they studied? And how can we dismantle the myth of the Pacific Island as human laboratory today?

The Myth of the Natural Laboratory answers these questions by tracing two centuries of interest in both of these communities. Across chapters on sailors, colonial administrators, anthropologists, historians, and linguists, it critically historicizes the trope of the island as laboratory and argues for more critical examination of colonial science's reliance on Indigenous subjects. Over time, Pitcairn and Norfolk Islanders became, on a per capita basis, among the most studied people on earth, often subject to dozens of investigations across their lifetimes to the point that they were sometimes accused by their investigators of being more expert in fieldwork than the fieldworkers who came to study them. They inflected the ways investigations proceeded on both islands and leveraged the interest in their communities to stake their own claims and produce their own counternarratives. Almost without exception, researchers failed to acquire or produce the knowledge they sought. This book suggests that far from becoming ideal natural experiments producing easily accessible knowledge, both islands ultimately became sites of epistemic derangement, places where attempts to produce knowledge were halted, redirected, or reconfigured. Bringing recent conversations on imperial anxiety to bear on questions of science and empire, Adrian Young studies these fractures and failures to produce knowledge, showing the ways colonial paranoias and colonial histories deranged studies, practices, categories, and assumptions.

The Pitcairn Islanders Harry Lionel Shapiro, 1968 The South Seas Sean Brawley, Chris Dixon, 2015-04-21

The South Seas charts the idea of the South Seas in popular cultural productions of the English-speaking world from the beginnings of the Western enterprise in the Pacific until the eve of the Pacific War. Building on the notion that the influences on the creation of a text and the ways in which its audience receives the text are essential for understanding the historical significance of particular productions, Sean Brawley and Chris Dixon explore the ways in which authors and producers' ideas about the South Seas were haunted by others who had written on the subject and how they in turn influenced future generations of knowledge producers. The South Seas is unique in its examination of an array of cultural texts. Along with the foundational literary texts that established and perpetuated the South Seas tradition in written form, the authors explore diverse cultural forms such as art, music, theater, film,
