Handbook of Theories of Aging Vern L. Bengtson, Vern L. Bengtson, PhD, Richard Settersten, 2016-05-28 This state of the art handbook will keep researchers and practitioners in gerontology abreast of the newest theories and models of aging With virtually all new contributors and content this edition contains 35 chapters by the most highly respected luminaries in the field It addresses theories and concepts built on cumulative knowledge in four disciplinary areas biology psychology social sciences and policy and practice as well as landmark advances in trans disciplinary science With its explicit focus on theory the handbook is unique in providing essential knowledge about primary explanations for aging spanning from cells to societies The chapters in the third edition place a strong emphasis on the future of theory development assessing the current state of theories and providing a roadmap for how theory can shape research and vice versa in years to come Many chapters also address connections between theories and policy or practice Each set of authors has been asked to consider how theories in their area address matters of diversity and inequalities in aging and how theories might be revised or tested with these matters in mind The third edition also contains a new section Standing on the Shoulders of Giants which includes personal essays by senior gerontologists who share their perspectives on the history of ideas in their fields and on their experiences with the process and prospects of developing good theory Hallmarks of the Third Edition Highlights important gains in trans disciplinary theories of aging Emphasizes the future of theory development Provides insightson theory development from living legends in gerontology Examines what human diversity and inequality mean for aging theories Emphasizes interconnections between theory research intervention and policy Underscores international issues with greater representation of international authors Includes section introductions by the editors and associate editors that summarize theoretical developments Key Features Highlightsvariability and diversity in aging processes from the cellular level of biological aging to the societal level of public policy Provides insightson theory development from living legends in gerontology Offers intergenerational interdisciplinary and international perspectives Disseminates a forward thinking future oriented focus in theory development The Environment for Aging Russell A. Ward, Mark La Gory, Susan R. Sherman, 1988 The nature and consequences of aging depend on its environmental context and the literature does not treat the various environmental dimensions in an integrated fashion The authors introduce a general approach to the human ecosystem highlighting theoretical and empirical issues necessary to an understanding of person environment interaction related to aging They then investigate in detail three aspects of the environment of older persons residential and neighborhood interpersonal support networks and age related attitudes They give specific attention to the impact of the age composition of neighborhoods and interpersonal networks The authors present findings from their interview survey of 1 185 community residents aged 60 and over Major findings from the interviews include Despite objective neighborhood problems older persons express high neighborhood satisfaction This partly reflects limited residential options as well as a passive and vicarious spatial experience The environment is experienced in diverse ways however urbanism and personal competence shape the nature and outcomes of person environment interaction Older persons have relatively robust interpersonal support networks Perceived sufficiency of contact and support are more salient to morale than are more objective measures of interpersonal support Although attitudes toward other older people are generally favorable patterns of age identity reflect a detrimental view of aging There is little evidence that socialization for aging or age group solidarity make aging easier in this regard Older persons exhibit moderate age homogeneity within their interpersonal networks partly reflecting neighborhood age concentration Contrary to the apparent benefits of planned age segregated housing age homogeneity in neighborhoods and networks does not contribute to well being The authors examine three major themes in their concluding chapter age itself does not loom large in the lives of these community residents though age becomes salient under certain conditions there is diversity in the implications of the environmental context for aging in particular reflecting an environmental docility hypothesis and aging must be viewed in interactional or transactional terms older people construct the environment as a subjective entity

Ageing and Social Policy in Australia Allan Borowski, Sol Encel, Elizabeth Ozanne, 1997-11-17

Industrialised countries worldwide have for years been confronting the prospect of a steadily ageing population This book first published in 1997 reflects the breadth of research into gerontology and analyses the major themes and issues in the area of ageing and social policy in both an Australian context and from an international comparative perspective Topics discussed include unemployment education and housing for the aged Added to this is the contemporary influence of multiculturalism and the challenge it poses to policies and programs that must cater for a growing diversity in the ageing population A special focus is given to the situation of women and Aboriginal Australians and the specific structural disadvantages they face This book is essential reading for students and policy makers in sociology social and public policy gerontology and public health

Human Stress and the Environment Allen H. Rose, 1994-09-23 This compilation of papers represents a comprehensive study by scientists and professionals of the effects of stress on health and possible remedies to the problems arising from stress The sources of stress considered here include work transport waste and general environmental factors Mental and physical health aspects are considered in detail in addition to the effects of stress on ageing and well being The study of stress in animals which may well tell us more about stress in humans is also discussed here In view of the fact that stress in modern life is one of the major factors affecting human health the volume represents a timely and valuable contribution to the current debate on community health
