A companion website offers additional content, including script excerpts, show bible samples, interviews with television content creators, and more.

Irishness and Womanhood in Nineteenth-Century British Writing Thomas Tracy, 2017-11-30. In The Wild Irish Girl, the powerful Irish heroine's marriage to a heroic Englishman symbolizes the Anglo-Irish novelist Lady Morgan's reimagining of the relationship between Ireland and Britain and between men and women. Using this most influential of pro-union novels as his point of departure, the author argues that nineteenth-century debates over what constitutes British national identity often revolved around representations of Irishness, especially Irish womanhood. He maps out the genealogy of this development from Edgeworth's Castle Rackrent through Trollope's Irish novels, focusing on the pivotal period from 1806 through the 1870s. The author's model enables him to elaborate the ways in which gender ideals are specifically contested in fiction, the discourses of political debate and social reform, and the popular press for the purpose of defining not only the place of the Irish in the union with Great Britain but the nature of Britishness itself.

Meditating Death in Medieval and Early Modern Devotional Writing Mark Chinca, 2020-06-11. The monograph series Oxford Studies in Medieval Literature and Culture showcases the plurilingual and multicultural quality of medieval literature and actively seeks to promote research that not only focuses on the array of subjects medievalists now pursue in literature, theology, and philosophy, in social, political, jurisprudential, and intellectual history, the history of art, and the history of science, but also that combines these subjects productively. It offers innovative studies on topics that may include, but are not limited to, manuscript and book history, languages and literatures of the global Middle Ages, race and the post-colonial, the digital humanities, media and performance, music, medicine, the history of affect and the emotions, the literature and practices of devotion, the theory and history of gender and sexuality, ecocriticism, and the environment. Theories of aesthetics, medievalism. Meditating about death and the afterlife was one of the most important techniques that Christian societies in medieval and early modern Europe had at their disposal for developing a sense of individual selfhood. Believers who regularly and systematically reflected on the inevitability of death and the certainty of eternal punishment in hell or reward in heaven would acquire an understanding of themselves as unique persons defined by their moral actions they would also learn to discipline themselves by feeling remorse for their sins doing penance and cultivating a permanent vigilance over their future thoughts and deeds This book covers a crucial period in the formation and transformation of the technique of meditating on death from the thirteenth century when a practice that had mainly been the preserve of a monastic elite began to be more widely disseminated among all segments of Christian society to the sixteenth when the Protestant Reformation transformed the technique of spiritual exercise into a bible based mindfulness that avoided the stigma of works piety It discusses the textual instructions for meditation as well as the theories and beliefs and doctrines that lay behind them the sources are Latin and vernacular and enjoyed widespread circulation in Roman Christian and Protestant Europe during the period under consideration
