Bendinelli, 2013-11-11 Biomedical scientists widely acknowledge that individuals immune responsiveness is important in resistance to infections by microorganisms including fungi Because of the devastating acquired immunodeficiency syndrome AIDS epidemic caused by the human immunodeficiency retrovirus it is now accepted that suppressed immune responses especially cellular immunity are important contributors to increased individual susceptibility to opportunistic infections including infections caused by fungi which were at one time thought to be very lowly or nonpathogenic Within the last few years there has been an almost explosive increase in interest and studies concerning the nature and mechanisms of the immune response to fungal infections Many immunologists who are not well versed in mycology have begun to study the nature and mechanisms of antifungal immunity using a wide variety of newer as well as more conventional immunologic technologies both in vivo and in vitro Up to the 1980s however there was little interest among basic immunologists concerning fungal immunity This situation has changed dramatically in the past half decade mainly because of AIDS violence to light and offer a number of suggestions for its remedy A Time to Kill: The Bible and Self Defense Greg

The BALB/c Mouse Michael Potter, 2012-12-06

The mouse was first used in immunological research by Paul Ehrlich in 1891 in an extraordinary series of experiments on the maternal transfer of antitoxic immunity A short 22 years later in 1913 Halsey Bagg acquired a stock of albino mice from a commercial dealer and used them in a series of experiments on learning Because he was interested in the genetics of intelligence Halsey Bagg began breeding a pedigreed line of these mice that were subsequently named for him Bagg Albino Though Halsey Bagg is not credited with initiating the inbred strains of mice his stock curiously has played an indisputably important role Bagg Albinos were progenitors of the present day BALB c family of sublines the subject of this book They were also used as one of the parents in the development of inbred strains A CBA and C3H three other very famous strains Today the BALB c mouse is among the five most widely used inbred strains in biomedical research and a particular favorite in immunology and infectious disease research The hallmark of the BALB c response to so many kinds of infections is susceptibility and sometimes an exaggerated susceptibility but this paradoxically is not associated with immunodeficiency as BALB c is an excellent responder to immunization These characteristics have made the BALB c mouse a model for identifying genes that determine susceptibility to infectious and neoplastic diseases In 1985 the laboratory BALB c mouse became 72 years old The current
