Brown, Larry E. Beutler, James N. Breckenridge, Philip G. Zimbardo, 2006-09-07 During the past decade we have witnessed a dramatic transformation in the nature and uses of terrorism In the 70s it was often repeated that terrorists want a lot of people watching not a lot of people dead today it is more accurate to say that terrorists want a lot of people dead and even more people crippled by fear and grief A major strategic intent of modern terrorists is to use larger scale physical attacks to cause stress in the general population These changes in terrorist strategy have made it clear that we need better psychological and social responses to terrorism and man made disasters The psychological science needed to provide proper and effective treatment for victims of horrendous events such as September 11th and future potential terrorist acts simply does not exist so military medical and psychological experts must work together to improve their understanding of mass casualty terrorism In Psychology of Terrorism leading national and international experts present the first results of this effort including the newest findings on treatment of and clinical responses to terrorism along with their respective underlying theories They address the history of terrorism types and effects of weapons of mass destruction or disruption the role of the military government agencies and volunteer groups in responding to terrorist threats psychological consequences of terrorism and treatment of special populations such as children and older adults This volume will be an ideal text for both academic and professional courses as well as a comprehensive resource for mental health clinicians and researchers medical care providers educators public health specialists government employees police and fire departments and non profit agencies that provide services and craft policy Decision Making in Aviation Don Harris, 2017-07-05 Decision making pervades every aspect of life people make hundreds of decisions every day The vast majority of these are trivial and without a right or wrong answer In some respects there is also nothing extraordinary about pilot decision making It is only the setting that is different the underlying cognitive processes are just the same However it is the context and the consequences of a poor decision which serve to differentiate aeronautical decision making Decisions on the flight deck are often made with incomplete information and while under time pressure The implications for inadequate performance is much more serious than in many other professions Poor decisions are implicated in over half of all aviation accidents This volume contains key papers published over the last 25 years providing an overview of the major paradigms by which aeronautical decision making has been investigated Furthermore decision making does not occur in isolation It is a joint function of the flight tasks knowledge equipment on the flight deck and other stressors In this volume of collected papers works from leading authors in the field consider all these aspects of aeronautical decision making Thinking Through Crisis Amy L.
