Water Governance Emma S. Norman, Christina Cook, 2016-03-09 Those who control water hold power Complicating matters water is a flow resource constantly changing states between liquid solid and gas being incorporated into living and non-living things and crossing boundaries of all kinds As a result water governance has much to do with the question of boundaries and scale who is in and who is out of decision-making structures Which of the many boundaries that water crosses should be used for decision-making related to its governance Recently efforts to understand the relationship between water and political boundaries have come to the fore of water governance debates how and why does water governance fragment across sectors and governmental departments How can we govern shared waters more effectively How do politics and power play out in water governance This book brings together and connects the work of scholars to engage with such questions The introduction of scalar debates into water governance discussions is a significant advancement of both governance studies and scalar theory decision making with respect to water is often implicitly a decision about scale and its related politics When water managers or scholars explore municipal water service delivery systems argue that integrated approaches to salmon stewardship are critical to their survival query the damming of a river to provide power to another region and investigate access to potable water they are deliberating the politics of scale Accessible engaging and informative the volume offers an overview and advancement of both scalar and governance studies while examining practical solutions to the challenges of water governance

The Value of Using Hydrological Datasets for Water Allocation Decisions: Earth Observations, Hydrological Models and Seasonal Forecasts Alexander José Kaune Schmidt, 2019-11-21 An increasing number of hydrological datasets from earth observations hydrological models and seasonal forecasts have become available for water managers consultants and the general public These datasets are state of the art products which are usually accessible online and may contribute to develop hydrological studies and support water resources management However the added value of these datasets has not been completely explored in decision making processes Research studies have assessed how well data can help in predicting climate but there is a lack of knowledge on how well data can help in water allocation decisions This work provides numerical tools methods and results to evaluate the value of using hydrological datasets to support water allocation decisions at river basin and irrigation district scale An integrated approach is used to predict climate improve decisions and reduce negative impacts Results show that investing in hydrological data with finer spatial and temporal resolution and longer periods of record improves water allocation decisions and reduces agricultural production loss in large irrigation schemes Using river discharge data from hydrological models and global precipitation enhances irrigation area planning when little in situ data is available Moreover using seasonal streamflow forecasts improves available water estimates resulting in better water allocation decisions The framework was tested in Costa Rica Colombia and Australia but can be applied in any case study around the world
