The Cosmic Breath Amos Yong, 2012-05-10 Recent thinking in the interfaith dialogue and in the theology science dialogue have taken a pneumatological turn The Cosmic Breath explores this pneumatological theology as unfolded in the Christian Buddhist dialogue alongside critical interaction with the theology and science conversation As an attempt in comparative and constructive Christian philosophical theology its central thesis is that a pneumatological approach to Buddhist traditions in further dialogue with modern science generates new philosophical resources that invigorate Christian thinking about the natural world and humanity s place in it The result is a transformation of the Buddhist Christian dialogue from insights generated in the theology and science interface and a contribution to the religion and science dialogue from a comparative theological and philosophical perspective The Oxford Handbook of Religion and Science Philip Clayton, Zachary

Simpson, 2006 The field of science and religion is exploding in popularity among both academics and the reading public This is a comprehensive and authoritative introduction to the debate written by the leading experts yet accessible to the general reader Has Science Displaced the Soul? Kevin Sharpe, Rebecca Bryant Bryant, 2005-04-29 Can science explain powerful human emotions such as love and happiness Or are these emotions something more than the action of biochemicals and electrical impulses Science is constantly uncovering the mysteries of our nature but we are uneasy about submitting our most intimate feelings to its scrutiny Religion tells us that God is love but neuroscience counters with love as a well timed trickle of transmitters and hormones In the 21st century is it necessary to discard our traditional beliefs of a loving God in favor of dopamine With doctorates in both mathematics and theology Kevin Sharpe explores these notions and asks the question Has Science Displaced the Soul Unflinching in facing these issues Sharpe provides a clear and current summary of the discoveries of science and what our spiritual traditions still have to offer in the ongoing effort to understand our deepest urges He confronts serious unanswered questions How can the Divine direct a random process like evolution How can we reconcile the big bang with creation out of nothing Does it make sense to claim that the non biological Divine shares in human purposes and desires Sharpe s solution is controversial since it requires that we demolish and reconstruct some of our most trusted conceptions By examining the ways in which scientific and religious claims can be harmonized he offers a radical and powerful interpretation of love and happiness in the divine context

Science of God

Kevin J. Sharpe,2006 Is theology responsible to tradition or new insight Institutional church or humanity at large Spiritual or everyday existence Revelation or scientific findings In his new book Science of God Truth in the Age of Science Kevin Sharpe proposes a method for doing theology which does not divorce it from the practical applications of science Not only does this work establish that theology ought to be empirical in what it says about the world and God s relationship to it but it also outlines a clear method for doing this Science and theology can each share the same empirical method when each attempts a description of any part of reality it is relying on its own essential assumptions or lens When applied to theology the method assumes the existence of God and then seeks the nature of God using falsifiable and verifiable techniques Starting with the sciences that examine happiness particularly biology genetics psychology and social psychology Science of God seeks to understand the spiritual nature of humans and through it the nature of God
