The Dilemma Of Context

Anna Ershler Richert

The Dilemma Of Context:

The Dilemma of Context Ben-Ami Scharfstein, 1991-06 In The Dilemma of Context Scharfstein contends that the problems encountered with context are insoluble. He explains why this problem lays an intellectual burden on us that while remaining inescapable can become so heavy it destroys the understanding it was created to further.

The Problem of Context Roy Dilley, 1999 The apparently simple notion that it is contextualization and invocation of context that give form to our interpretations raises important questions about context definition. Moreover, different disciplines involved in the elucidation and interpretation of meanings construe context in different ways. How do these ways differ? And what analytical strategies are adopted in order to suggest that the relevant context is self-evident? The notion of context has received less attention than is due such a central key concept in social anthropology as well as in other related disciplines. This collection of contributions from a group of leading social anthropologists and anthropological linguists addresses the question of how the idea of context is constructed, invoked, and deployed in the interpretations put forward by social anthropologists. The ethnographic focus embraces peoples from regions such as Bali, Europe, Malawi, and Zaire. Primarily theoretical in its aims, the work also draws on expertise from anthropological linguistics and philosophy in order to set the issue as much in a comparative disciplinary perspective as in a comparative cross-cultural one.

The River Pollution Dilemma in Victorian England Leslie Rosenthal, 2016-02-17 Nineteenth century Britain witnessed a dramatic increase in its town population as a hitherto largely rural economy transformed itself into an urban one Though the political and social issues arising from these events are well known little is known about how the British legal process coped with the everyday strains that emerged from the unprecedented scale of these changes This book explores the river pollution dilemma faced by the British courts during the second half of the nineteenth century when the legal process had to confront the new incompatible realities arising from the increasing amounts of untreatable waste flowing into the rivers This dilemma struck at the heart of both Victorian urban and rural society as the necessary sanitary reformation of the swelling cities and expanding industry increasingly poisoned the rivers threatening the countryside and agricultural rents and livelihoods Focusing on ten legal disputes the book investigates the dilemma that faced the courts namely how to protect the traditional and valued rights of landholders whose rivers and lands were being polluted by industrial waste and untreated sewage whilst not hindering the progress of sanitary reform and economic progress in the towns The case studies considered involve major industrialising centres such as Birmingham Leeds Northampton Wolverhampton and Barnsley but also include smaller towns such as Tunbridge Wells Leamington Spa and Harrogate The fundamental issues raised remain as important today as they did in Victorian times The need for the courts to balance a variety of conflicting needs and rights within the limits of contemporary technological capabilities often played out in surprising ways with outcomes not always in line with theoretical expectations As such the historical context of the disputes provide fascinating insights into nineteenth century legal process and the environmental and social attitudes of the times
