The Dissonance Of Democracy Listening Conflict And Citizenship:

The Dissonance of Democracy Susan Bickford, 2018-10-18 Although the role of shared speech in political action has received much theoretical attention too little thought has focused on the practice of listening in political interaction according to Susan Bickford Even in a formally democratic polity political action occurs in a context of conflict and inequality thus the shared speech of citizenship differs significantly from the conversations of friendly associates Bickford suggests that democratic politics requires a particular quality of attention one not based on care or friendship Analyzing specifically political listening is central to the development of democratic theory she contends and to envisioning democratic practices for contemporary society Bickford's analysis draws on the work of Aristotle and of Hannah Arendt to establish the conflictual and contentious character of politics To analyze the social forces that deflect attention from particular voices Bickford mobilizes contemporary feminist theory including Gloria Anzaldua's work on the connection between identity and politics She develops a conception of citizen interaction characterized by adversarial communication in a context of inequality Such a conception posits public identity and hence public listening as active and creative and grounded in particular social and political contexts

Giving Voice Meryl Alper, 2017-01-20 How communication technologies meant to empower people with speech disorders to give voice to the voiceless are still subject to disempowering structural inequalities Mobile technologies are often hailed as a way to give voice to the voiceless Behind the praise though are beliefs about technology as a gateway to opportunity and voice as a metaphor for agency and self representation In Giving Voice Meryl Alper explores these assumptions by looking closely at one such case the use of the Apple iPad and mobile app Proloquo2Go which converts icons and text into synthetic speech by children with disabilities including autism and cerebral palsy and their families She finds that despite claims to empowerment the hardware and software are still subject to disempowering structural inequalities Views of technology as a great equalizer she illustrates rarely account for all the ways that culture law policy and even technology itself can reinforce disparity particularly for those with disabilities Alper explores among other things alternative understandings of voice the surprising sociotechnical importance of the iPad case and convergences and divergences in the lives of parents across class She shows that working class and low income parents understand the app and other communication technologies differently from upper and middle class parents and that the institutional ecosystem reflects a bias toward those more privileged Handing someone a talking tablet computer does not in itself give that person a voice Alper finds that the ability to mobilize social economic and cultural capital shapes the extent to which individuals can not only speak but be heard
