The Doomswoman:

The Doomswoman Gertrude Franklin Horn Atherton, 1892 The Doomswoman Gertrude Franklin Horn Atherton, 2007-06-01 It was at Governor Alvarado's house in Monterey that Chonita first knew of Diego Estenega. I had told him much of her but had never cared to mention the name of Estenega in the presence of an Iturbi y Moncada. Chonita came to Monterey to stand godmother to the child of Alvarado and of her friend Dona Martina his wife. She arrived the morning before the christening and no one thought to tell her that Estenega was to be godfather. The house was full of girls, relatives of the young mother gathered for the ceremony and subsequent week of festivities. Benicia, my little one, was at the rancho with Ysabel Herrera and I was staying with the Alvarados. So many were the guests that Chonita and I slept together. We had not seen each other for a year and had so much to say that we did not sleep at all. She was ten years younger than I but we were as close friends as she with her alternate frankness and reserve would permit. But I had spent several months of each year since childhood at her home in Santa Barbara and I knew her better than she knew herself. When later I read her journal I found little in it to surprise me but much to fill and cover with shapely form the skeleton of the story which passed in greater part before my eyes.

The Doomswoman Gertrude Atherton, 2021-10-07 Published in 1893 and set against a backdrop of violence between Mexico and the United States, this is a passionate and compelling love story from famous American author Gertrude Atherton. Loyal to her family, Doña Chonita finds herself questioning her firmly held morals and values when she falls for the charming Don Diego. The star-crossed lovers' worlds are turned upside down by their passion as well as forces outside their control. Vividly written, this is a haunting romance and a compelling piece of classic American literature. Gertrude Atherton (1857-1948) was an American novelist, short story writer, and early feminist. Born in California, Gertrude attended schools in California and Kentucky and became widely read. She married George H. B. Atherton in 1876 and lived with him and his mother in San Francisco where they had two children. Atherton struggled with married life; her husband did not support her writing ambitions and Gertrude found life as a wife and mother stifling. When her husband died at sea in 1887, Atherton felt free to pursue her burgeoning career as an author and went on to publish over 50 novels. She is best known for her California series of novels which explored the social history of California and included popular works such as The Californians and the controversial Black Oxen, which was adapted into a silent movie in 1923. Feminist themes and strong female characters are common in her novels. She died in San Francisco in 1948.

The Doomswoman Gertrude Franklin Horn Atherton, 1901 The Doomswoman Gertrude Atherton, 2014-09-01 This refreshingly innovative take on the age-old theme of star-crossed lovers is set during the period when Mexico and the U.S. were warring over the control of California. The lovely Doña Chonita is loyal to her family's pro-Mexico position in the conflict but a chance encounter with a silver-tongued Lothario named Don Diego throws everything she holds true into question.

The Doomswoman Gertrude Franklin Horn Atherton, 2009-04 Work from American novelist whose novels are often characterised by strong heroines who pursue independent lives The Doomswoman Gertrude Franklin Horn Atherton, 2008-07 The Doomswoman Gertrude Franklin Horn Atherton, 1893 The Doomswoman , The doomswoman Gertrude Franklin Horn Atherton, 1901
