Prevention and Cessation Giuseppe La Torre, 2013-07-03 Tobacco smoking is considered the big killer and one of the most avoidable risk factors for many human pathologies Reducing and controlling tobacco smoking should be a primary aim for a certain population in order to reduce harms to health caused by this important risk factor and it seems urgent to adopt intervention tools involved in responsibility fields such as health care education politics economy and media Among health professionals the prevalence of tobacco smoke is extremely high more than other professional categories and this could be partly attributed to a low weight that tobacco smoking has in the medical curriculum of future physicians that will contribute in a determinant way to healthy choices of their patients In order to realise that the medical students need to be adequately trained with the aim of acquire competences and skills that help patients to prevent tobacco smoking and to increase smoking cessation through a programme oriented to specific issue related to the potential harm of tobacco products A survey conducted by Ferry et al in the American Schools of Medicine underlined the lack of courses related to tobacco smoking Moreover a randomised trial carried out by Cummings et al the Schools of Medicine result as the ideal setting to teach smoking cessation techniques to health professionals The National Cancer Institute in 1992 recommended that primary and secondary prevention interventions on tobacco smoking will become mandatory in the curriculum of Medical USA students However until now this recommendation still is far from being fully implemented The aim of the book is to give an overview on the epidemiology of tobacco smoking among different settings and populations but with a special focus on health professionals and medicals students and to show available examples of smoking prevention and cessation training in different settings Journal of the National Cancer Institute ,2004 Each issue is packed with extensive news about important cancer related science policy politics and people Plus there are editorials and reviews by experts in the field book reviews and commentary on timely topics Changing Addictive Behavior Jalie A. Tucker, Dennis M. Donovan, G. Alan Marlatt, 2001-02-15 This volume proposes that prevailing clinical approaches to treating addictive behaviors are actually best suited to a minority of the population with problems in the case of substance abusers those with substantial functional impairment and physical dependence But what about persons with mild to moderate addictive behavior problems for whom intensive treatment may prove unnecessarily costly disruptive and stigmatizing Or those substance abusers who are unable or unmotivated to abstain but want to reduce the harm associated with drug use Contributors draw upon cutting edge theory and research to examine ways that traditional therapeutic treatments can be supplemented by public health interventions that extend the reach and effectiveness of care Timely and pragmatic the book points the way toward necessary evolutions in the roles of behavior change specialists in today s challenging health care environment Primary Care Medicine Allan H.
