Some Challenges In Contemporary Archaeology:

Some Challenges in Contemporary Archaeology John C. Barrett, 1995 Archaeology is a diverse discipline it operates through a number of institutional arrangements each of which has a particular agenda and set of agreed working practices Diversity might be regarded as a strength reflecting the dynamism with which archaeological concerns have become a widely used currency in our modern world But if we accept that diversity exists in a single discipline we might also wonder what defines the common ground what is it that at the end of the day continues to make us all archaeologists The second Oxbow Lecture presents the text of a lecture delivered in 1995 at the Institute of Field Archaeologists annual Archaeology in Britain Conference and explores the current state and priorities of British archaeology The Oxford Handbook of Public

Archaeology Robin Skeates, Carol McDavid, John Carman, 2012-01-05 Divided into four distinct sections and drawing across various disciplines this volume seeks to reappraise the place of archaeology in the contemporary world by providing a series of essays that critically engage with both old and current debates in the field of public archaeology Companion to Historiography Michael Bentley, 2006-02-27 The Companion to Historiography is an original analysis of the moods and trends in historical writing throughout its phases of development and explores the assumptions and procedures that have formed the creation of historical perspectives Contributed by a distinguished panel of academics each essay conveys in direct jargon free language a genuinely international wide angled view of the ideas traditions and institutions that lie behind the contemporary urgency of world history Archaeological Theory and Scientific Practice Andrew Jones, 2001-12-06 Is archaeology an art or a science This question has been hotly debated over the last few decades with the rise of archaeological science At the same time archaeologists have seen a change in the intellectual character of their discipline as many writers have adopted approaches influenced by social theory The discipline now encompasses both archaeological scientists and archaeological theorists and discussion regarding the status of archaeology remains polarised In this 2001 book Andrew Jones argues that we need to analyse the practice of archaeology Through an analysis of archaeological practice influenced by recent developments in the field of science studies and with the aid of extensive case studies he develops a new framework which allows the interpretative and methodological components of the discipline to work in tandem His reassessment of the status and character of archaeology will be of interest to students scholars and professionals

Participating in the Knowledge Society R. Finnegan, 2005-09-27 In current debates about the knowledge society and the organization of research the spotlight is most often on the universities This interdisciplinary and transhistorical volume focuses on the less often recognized work of independent researchers creating and participating in knowledge outside the academy from seventeenth century north country astronomers to Victorian naturalists to today's think tanks community historians and new forms of researching and publishing through the internet These intriguing cases raise challenging issues about the location definition and validation of research about active participation in knowledge generation and about the perhaps changing boundaries of university today Far from Equilibrium: An archaeology of energy, life and humanity Michael J. Boyd, Roger C. P. Doonan, 2021-03-03 Archaeology is in crisis Spatial turns material turns and the ontological turn have directed the discipline away from its hard won battle to find humanity in the past Meanwhile popularised science camouflaged as archaeology produces shock headlines built on ancient DNA that reduce humanity's most intriguing historical problems to two dimensional caricatures Today archaeology finds itself less able than ever to proclaim its relevance to the modern world This volume foregrounds the relevance of the scholarship of John Barrett to this crisis Twenty four writers representing three generations of archaeologists scrutinise the current turmoil in the discipline and highlight the resolutions that may be found through Barrett's analytical framework Topics include archaeology and the senses the continuing problem of the archaeological record practice discourse and agency reorienting archaeological field practice the question of different expressions of human diversity and material ecologies Understanding archaeology as both a universal and highly specific discipline case studies range from the Aegean to Orkney and encompass Anatolia Korea Romania United Kingdom and the very nature of the Universe itself This critical examination of John Barrett's contribution to archaeology is simultaneously a response to his urgent call to arms to reorient archaeology in the service of humanity Nigerian
