The Origins And Early Development Of Witham Essex Oxbow Monographs:

The Origins and Early Development of Witham, Essex Warwick Rodwell, Brian K. Davison, 1993 Witham Camp has often been equated with Edward the Elder's burh but excavations since the 1930s have demonstrated it to be an Iron Age earthwork in which a castle was planted in the 12th century here also was the hundredal meeting place and focus of a royal manor Next to the earthwork lies a minster church early market site and a small planned settlement and a short distance away the Knights Templar laid out a substantial new town over the remains of a possible Viking camp This book reports on this whole remarkable complex using all available topographical archaeological and documentary evidence to trace the development of Witham from the prehistoric era to the Middle Ages Essex Archaeology and History, 2006 Kingdom, Civitas, and County Stephen Rippon, 2018-04-19 This book explores the development of territorial identity in the late prehistoric Roman and early medieval periods Over the course of the Iron Age a series of marked regional variations in material culture and landscape character emerged across eastern England that reflect the development of discrete zones of social and economic interaction The boundaries between these zones appear to have run through sparsely settled areas of the landscape on high ground and corresponded to a series of kingdoms that emerged during the Late Iron Age In eastern England at least these pre Roman socio economic territories appear to have survived throughout the Roman period despite a trend towards cultural homogenization brought about by Romanization Although there is no direct evidence for the relationship between these socio economic zones and the Roman administrative territories known as civitates they probably corresponded very closely The fifth century saw some Anglo Saxon immigration but whereas in East Anglia these communities spread out across much of the landscape in the Northern Thames Basin they appear to have been restricted to certain coastal and estuarine districts The remaining areas continued to be occupied by a substantial native British population including much of the East Saxon kingdom very little of which appears to have been Saxon By the sixth century a series of regionally distinct identities that can be regarded as separate ethnic groups had developed which corresponded very closely to those that had emerged during the late prehistoric and Roman periods These ancient regional identities survived through to the Viking incursions whereafter they were swept away following the English reconquest and replaced with the counties with which we are familiar today The Fields of Britannia Stephen Rippon, Chris Smart (Archaeologist), Ben Pears, 2015 The Fields of Britannia is the first book to explore how far the countryside of Roman Britain has survived in use through to the present day shaping the character of our modern countryside Beyond the Medieval Village Stephen Rippon, 2008-11-27 The varied character of Britain's countryside provides communities with a strong sense of local identity One of the most significant features of the landscape in Southern Britain is the way that its character differs from region to region with compact villages in the Midlands contrasting with the sprawling hamlets of East Anglia and isolated farmsteads of Devon Even more remarkable is the very English feel of the landscape in southern Pembrokeshire in the far south west of Wales Hoskins described the English landscape as the richest historical record we possess and in this volume Stephen Rippon explores the origins of regional variations in landscape character arguing that while some landscapes date back to the centuries either side of the Norman Conquest other areas across southern Britain underwent a profound change around the 8th century AD

Landscapes of Monastic Foundation Tim Pestell, 2004 Pre Conquest monastic foundations in the present day counties of Norfolk and Suffolk in their topographical social economic and political environment evolution of religious devotion in East Anglia since the 7th century Conversion the influence of the Anglo Saxon past on the post Conquest monastic landscape

Territoriality and the Early Medieval Landscape Stephen Rippon, 2022 An exploration of small early folk communities prior to the eleventh century showing their development and sophistication All communities have a strong sense of identity with the area in which they live which for England in the early medieval period manifested itself in a series of territorial entities ranging from large kingdoms down to small districts known as pagi or regiones This book investigates these small early folk territories and the way that they evolved into the administrative units recorded in Domesday across an entire kingdom that of the East Saxons broadly speaking what is now Essex Middlesex most of Hertfordshire and south Suffolk A wide range of evidence is drawn upon including archaeology written documents place names and the early cartographic sources The book looks in particular at the relationship between Saxon immigrants and the native British population and argues that initially these ethnic groups occupied different parts of the landscape until a dynasty which assumed an Anglo Saxon identity achieved political ascendancy its members included the so called Prittlewell Prince buried with spectacular grave good in Prittlewell near Southend on Sea in southern Essex Other significant places discussed include London the seat of the first East Saxon bishopric the possible royal villas at Wicken Bonhunt near Saffron Walden and Maldon and St Peter's Chapel at Bradwell on Sea one of the most important surviving churches from the early Christian period

Essex Record Office Publications, 1999 The Essex Landscape John Michael Hunter, 1999

Ritual Landscapes of Roman South-east Britain David Rudling, 2008 An understanding of religious beliefs and practices is often essential when trying to understand different societies both those in the past and also those in the present In the case of Roman Britain we are faced with various situations the traditions of the indigenous Celts the beliefs and practices of the pagan Romans various religions which originated much further to the east than Rome and which were brought to Britain by soldiers administrators and traders the dynamics of culture contact between the different social groups especially the fusion of Roman and native cults and changes over time The role of religion in Roman times was very important and affected many aspects of everyday life and involved a duality of both public and domestic religious rituals Religious practices were therefore undertaken in various landscapes including urban rural temple complexes shrines cemeteries and households This volume provides up to date reviews of the evidence for different religious beliefs practices and types of site within South East Britain generally but for London Surrey Sussex and Kent in particular This book will be of interest and use to a wide range of people

BOOK JACKET Minster Churches in the Dorset Landscape Teresa Anne Hall, 2000 A detailed examination of high status churches and their environment in the Dorset or Wessex landscape in order to trace continuity from Roman and early Christian sites

Knights Templar in Britain Evelyn Lord, 2013-12-19 The Knights Templar In Britain examines exactly who became knights what rituals sustained them where the power bases were and how their tentacles spread through the political and economic worlds of Britain before their defeat at the hands of the Inquisition some two hundred years later Founded in the early twelfth century the mysterious Knights Templar rose to be the most powerful military order of the Middle Ages While their campaign in the Middle East and travels are well known their huge influence across the British isles remains virtually uncharted For readers interested in Medieval History

Neolithic and Bronze Age Monuments and Middle Iron Age Settlement at Lodge Farm, St Osyth, Essex Mark Germany, 2007 A sequence of prehistoric monuments was discovered on a low spur of land in the Tendring peninsula of north east Essex including an Early Neolithic causewayed enclosure an Early Bronze Age pond barrow and a Middle Bronze Age barrow group Cropmarks indicate an Early Neolithic cursus monument to the south of the causewayed enclosure The causewayed enclosure was bounded by up to three lines of concentric interrupted ditches more than 100 Early Neolithic pits lay within its interior Large groups of worked flint and pottery occurred more frequently in the pits than in the ditches Radiocarbon dates indicated that the pits were filled over a short period perhaps only forty years during the mid 4th millennium BC Pieces of Beaker and Grooved Ware in some of the latest ditch deposits suggest that some parts of the monument were still visible during the Late Neolithic period The pond barrow lay within the causewayed enclosure and was a focal point for funerary and ritual activity two cremation burials in Collared Urns a small Collared Urn in a large pit scorched ground and a scorched cremation burial pit indicating the site of a pyre also two post holes one scorched by fire and bearing the remains of a post Radiocarbon dates showed that the barrow had been in use in the first half of the 2nd millennium BC Its discovery was particularly interesting because few pond barrows have been found outside Wessex and the upper Thames valley After a hiatus of c 200 years the pond barrow again becomes a focal point for ritual activity Cut into the uppermost deposit were maybe four Middle Bronze Age pits containing pottery vessels Twenty two ring ditches from barrows associated with the Ardleigh Group tradition formed an arc to south and east These were associated with small pits containing cremated bone and Bucket Urns Rectilinear enclosures and trackways were laid out across the site in the Middle Iron Age and then an extensive settlement developed across the enclosures Nineteen round houses and sixteen or more post built structures were recorded
