incorporate in their solution In addition technology is continually improving and the choice of technology is often dictated by the volume variety and velocity of the data being managed A system of insight needs more than technology to succeed The data reservoir reference architecture includes description of governance and management processes and definitions to ensure the human and business systems around the technology support a collaborative self service and safe environment for data use The data reservoir reference architecture was first introduced in Governing and Managing Big Data for Analytics and Decision Makers REDP 5120 which is available at <http://www.redbooks.ibm.com/redpieces/abstracts/redp5120.html> This IBM Redbooks publication Designing and Operating a Data Reservoir builds on that material to provide more detail on the capabilities and internal workings of a data reservoir
