Abstract

Education plays a central role in supporting or impeding social mobility (Bourdieu & Passeron, 1974; Fend, 1980, 2006). The disadvantaged social and economic situation of the biggest part of the Roma minority (not only) in Central and Eastern Europe is usually seen as the main reason for their low educational attainment and success. And vice versa: the poor educational results are considered the main reason for their social deprivations. Therefore, education and lifelong learning have become the main strategy for improving their situation, especially since the 'Europeanization of the Roma issue' (Ram, 2015) through the European Union. Today, Education and lifelong learning are now the centre of EU-policies for achieving political and economic goals, like economic growth and social cohesion (Óhidy, 2008, 2009). This article analyzes the problems faced by and opportunities presented to the Roma people in selected Central and Eastern European countries, problems and opportunities arisen in the years up until 2020, regarding social mobility through education. In its analysis, this paper focused on the similarities. The article is based on 5 country studies from 2019, written by experts from the Czech Republic, Hungary, Poland, Romania and Slovakia (see Óhidy & Forray, 2019). The study uses the evidence from the country studies from Markéta Levínská, Dana Bittnerová & David Doubek, 2019 (Czech Republic), Julianna Boros & Eszter Gergye, 2019 (Hungary), Agnieszka Swietek & Wiktor Osuch, 2019 (Poland), Aurora Adina Colomeischi, 2019 (Romania) and Rastislav Rosinsky, 2019 (Slovakia) to explore the similarities in challenges, to increase the participation and success of Roma people.

Introduction

Roma have lived for several hundred years in Central and Eastern Europe. Although at the beginning of their migration from India to Europe in the 15th century they were appreciated for their craftsmanship (Fings, 2019), prejudice soon followed them. Today antigypsyism³ is often seen as a part of European history (Agarin, 2014; Selling et al., 2015, Tosi Cambini & Beluschi Fabeni, 2017, Kóczé & Rövid, 2017), which has only recently been discussed publicly. Despite the increasing political, scientific and public interest regarding the European Roma minority, there are still many knowledge gaps in relation to them. Not even the correct population number

³ Antigypsyism, also known as anti-Romani sentiment or Romaphobia is a form of Group-focused enmity against people, who are recognized as 'Roma'. Group-focused enmity means prejudices and hostility towards various target groups, based on an ideology of inequality (Heitmeyer, 2002). The European Commission defines it as a form of racism against Roma, which "is a historically rooted structural phenomenon that appears at institutional, social and interpersonal levels. It has its origins in how the majority views and treats those considered 'gypsies'. It is rooted in a process of 'othering' that builds on negative as well as positive, exoticising stereotypes" (European Commission, 2020).
