Narlawar,Mrunal Phatak,Neelam Sukhsohale,2012 Air pollution in big cities gets headlines but in many rural areas of developing countries indoor air pollution is an even more serious health problem Poverty condemns half of humanity to cook with solid fuels on inefficient stoves As a cause of ill health in the world indoor air pollution ranks behind only malnutrition AIDS tobacco and poor water sanitation Smoke in homes from these cook stoves is the fourth greatest risk factor for death and disease in the world s poorest countries and is linked to 1 6 million deaths per year Yet the international community has largely neglected it This report calls for global action to fight the killer in the kitchen smoke from cook stoves Indoor Air Quality for Poor Families ,2004 Indoor air pollution IAP from cooking and heating is estimated to kill a million children annually in developing countries To promote a better understanding of IAP the authors investigate the determinants of IAP in Bangladesh using the latest air monitoring technology and a national household survey The study concludes that IAP is dangerously high for many poor families in Bangladesh Concentrations of respirable airborne particulates PM10 300 ug m3 or greater are common in the sample implying widespread exposure to a serious health hazard Indoor Air Quality for Poor Families Susmita Dasgupta, Mainul Huq, M. Khaliquzzaman, 2013 Indoor air pollution IAP from cooking and heating is estimated to kill a million children annually in developing countries To promote a better understanding of IAP the authors investigate the determinants of IAP in Bangladesh using the latest air monitoring technology and a national household survey The study concludes that IAP is dangerously high for many poor families in Bangladesh Indoor Air Pollution in Developing Countries Kirk R. Smith, Youcheng Liu, Program on Environment (East-West Center), 1994 The Health Impacts of Exposure to Indoor Air Pollution from Solid Fuels in Developing Countries Majid Ezzati, Daniel M. Kammen, Resources for the Future, 2002 Indoor Air Pollution in Developing Countries Ethan Yeh, 2003 Indoor Air Quality for Poor Families Mainul Huq, 2016 Indoor air pollution IAP from cooking and heating is estimated to kill a million children annually in developing countries To promote a better understanding of IAP the authors investigate the determinants of IAP in Bangladesh using the latest air monitoring technology and a national household survey The study concludes that IAP is dangerously high for many poor families in Bangladesh Concentrations of respirable airborne particulates PM<sub>10</sub> 300 ug m<sup>3</sup> or greater are common in the sample implying widespread exposure to a serious health hazard Poor households in Bangladesh depend heavily on wood dung and other biomass fuels The econometric results indicate that fuel choice significantly affects indoor pollution levels Natural gas and kerosene are significantly cleaner than biomass fuels However household specific factors apparently matter more than fuel choice in determining PM<sub>10</sub> concentrations In some biomass burning households concentrations are scarcely higher than in households that use natural gas The results suggest that cross household variation is strongly affected by structural arrangements cooking locations construction materials and ventilation practices The authors analysis also suggests that poor families may not have to wait for clean fuels or clean stoves to enjoy significantly cleaner air Within their sample household population some arrangements are already producing relatively clean conditions even when "dirty" biomass fuels are used Since these arrangements are already within the means of poor families the scope for cost effective improvements may be larger than is commonly believed This paper a product of the Infrastructure and Environment Team Development Research Group is part of a larger effort in the group to identify appropriate policies for the improvement of environmental quality Up in Smoke Rema Hanna, Esther Duflo, Michael Greenstone, Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Center for Energy and Environmental Policy Research, Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Department of Economics, National Bureau of Economic Research, 2012 It is conventional wisdom that it is possible to reduce exposure to indoor air pollution improve health outcomes and decrease greenhouse gas emissions in the rural areas of developing countries through the adoption of improved cooking stoves This belief is largely supported by observational field studies and engineering or laboratory experiments However we provide new evidence from a randomized control trial conducted in rural Orissa India one of the poorest places in India on the benefits of a commonly used improved stove that laboratory tests showed to reduce indoor air pollution and require less fuel We track households for up to four years after they received the stove While we find a meaningful reduction in smoke inhalation in the first year there is no effect over longer time horizons We find no evidence of improvements in lung functioning or health and there is no change in fuel consumption and presumably greenhouse gas emissions The difference between the laboratory and field findings appear to result from households revealed low valuation of the stoves Households failed to use the stoves regularly or appropriately did not make the necessary investments to maintain them properly and usage rates ultimately declined further over time More broadly this study underscores the need to test environmental and health technologies in real world settings where behavior may temper impacts and to test them over a long enough horizon to understand how this behavioral effect evolves over time Keywords indoor air pollution human health climate change technology adoption JEL Classification O10 O13 O12 Q0 Q23 Q3 Q51 Q53 Q56 I15 I18
