

have not only been bilingual, but have either consciously chosen to return to writing in their native language after having been educated in a second language, consciously chosen to write in their second language, or, perhaps unconsciously, influenced and revitalized a second language by bringing to it the influence of their own first language or dialect. She discusses writers such as Tolstoy and Turgenev in the first group; Conrad and Beckett in the second; and Kafka, R. K. Narayan, and Chinua Achebe in the third group.

While Miller's book is somewhat more narrowly defined in terms of its geographical scope, its academic orientation, and its methodological approach than the volume edited by Alatis and Staczek, both books actually touch on many of the same issues and share common understandings about bilingualism and education. Specifically, both volumes see bilingualism and education as permanent, if changing, features of societies all around the world, and suggest that, with proper attention, each may be put to good advantage in the cultivation of the other.

LANGUAGE ACQUISITION

SUZANNE ROMAINE, The language of children and adolescents: The acquisition of communicative competence. Oxford and New York: Blackwell, 1984. Pp. xiii + 297.

In The language of children and adolescents, Suzanne Romaine studies "children's acquisition of communicative competence" and especially "the kinds of sociolinguistic skills children must learn in order to be able to interpret and produce utterances, which are not only grammatical but also appropriate within particular contexts" (xi). The book is thus a sociolinguistic complement to psycholinguistic studies of acquisition. It is likewise a noteworthy addition to the growing literature which assumes language acquisition to be part of the larger pragmatic and social processes of enculturation, especially significant in that it takes a developmental perspective on such basic sociolinguistic findings as research in the tradition of Labov (1972). The book is equally important, however, because of the questions Romaine raises, thorny questions other researchers often ignore or refuse to ask. These questions touch on issues as varied as the relationship between quantitative and ethnographic research within sociolinguistics, the relationship between sociolinguistics and other ways of studying
