

"Where do we come from? How did the universe begin? Why is the universe the way it is? What is death? How do we end there? And where do I all come from? Where are we going?"

"It, like me, you have looked at the stars and tried to make sense of what you saw, you have started to wonder what creates the universe's mind. The questions are just as thoughtfully simple but the answers have always been beyond our reach — until now." —Stephen Hawking

Hughson Stewart, one of the most brilliant physicians ever, was born in Scotland on January 10th of this year 1842, exactly 100 years after the death of Scottish physician, James Watson, during World War II.

As a kid, he was a bit too skinny, a bit too smart. But his dad was like, 'Some things would change this life: his appearance/becoming a gripping cinema, and his relationship is great too!'

His student studies at Oxford University in 1948 helped him become really interested in thermodynamics, quantum mechanics and its field theory. In 1952 he went to Trinity College at the University of Cambridge, where he got his Physics degree.

[illegible]

Several years later I have found a person that really improved his mind (B), a tremendously intelligent individual to his intellectual that started to help him to talk again.

What, then, is the considered aim of the structuralist programme? The answer to this question is easy. Because he has managed to do more than any other scientist to increase our understanding of the universe, the theories about which he has used the whole machinery of the sciences had been revolutionized.

In 1974 Hawking's research turned to the examination of the properties of black holes. He suggested the formation, following the big bang, of numerous objects containing as much as 1,000,000,000 tons of mass but occupying only the space of a proton. He called these objects mini black holes. These were unique in their immense mass and density that require that the laws of relativity rule them, while their size requires that the laws of quantum mechanics apply to them also. In 1974 Hawking proposed that, in accordance with the predictions of quantum theory (Quantum mechanics is the theory that describes how subatomic particles behave and how matter and radiation interact), black holes emit subatomic particles until they exhaust their energy and finally explode. His efforts in that helped to explain the properties of black holes, objects, which it was previously thought that nothing was supposed to be able to escape, but he discovered that they emit thermal radiation. To try to explain this phenomenon he proposed that a hole is particle pair is created near a black hole; one half of the pair might disappear into the black hole, leaving the other half to radiate away from the black hole. To a distant observer, the radiation of the leftmost particle would appear as thermal radiation following Stephen Williams, Microsoft Encarta Encyclopedia (2002).

During the 1970s thinking produced theories that connected several theories used by scientists to explain the universe. The production of space-time, the beginning of the universe, and a unified theory of physics are all

The thesis of this book is that the 19th century interest in the Antarctic functions for modern scholars as an important index to American self discovery and self definition from the 1830s onward According to the author American hopes for confirming identity came to be focused on an unlikely goal the discovery of the illusive Antarctic continent By examining in detail one literary product of the U S Exploring Expedition 1838 1842 to Antarctica James Croxall Palmer's epic poem Thulia A Tale of the Antarctic 1843 and its revision The Antarctic Mariner's Song 1868 and by locating these works within their cultural context Lenz reveals the significance and changing meaning of exploration to emerging American concepts of nationhood The volume also considers the tradition of American sea fiction in the works of such writers as James Fenimore Cooper Edgar Allan Poe and Herman Melville arguing that for these writers the Antarctic was a locus of symbolic meaning while for Palmer it was a process of individual and collective perception The 1868 version of the Palmer poem is attached here as an appendix A useful bibliography follows that appendix
