Abstract: The contracts are the indispensable legal instruments for any economic transaction. The international sale contract is the main legal instrument by which international commerce is carried out and through which the movement of goods from producer to consumer is ensured within cross-border relations. The sale contract in international commerce is the legal act by which the parties, the seller and the buyer, belonging to different states, commit each other to transfer the property of a good in return for payment of a price. Regarding the general rules applicable to the contract of international sale of goods, they are regulated by the "United Nations Convention on Contracts for the International Sale of Goods from Vienna". The Convention has adopted uniform rules to govern the international sale of goods contract, if the parties have not chosen expressly for the application of other rules. In this study I present the effects of international sale of goods in the light of the rules of the Vienna Convention of 1980.

1. General considerations

The United Nations Convention on contracts for the international sale of goods is a summary of the most important law systems, in the field of international merchandising, i.e. mostly between the Romanist (Roman-Germanic) system and the Anglo-Saxon one (of common law), which ensured the success and the relatively wide success and adherence to the Convention. Key tool in levelling the international trade law, the Vienna Convention adopts modern solutions, compatible with the current requirements of the international trade relations. [1]

At international level, the Convention became effective on January 1, 1988, and over 85 States have ratified it currently, turning it into one of the most successful uniform international laws.

The Convention has four parts: the scope and general provisions (First Part), Forming the agreement (Second part), Sale of Goods (Third Part) and Final provisions (Fourth Part). According to the provisions of the art. 92, upon becoming a member of the Convention, any State may declare not the it is not bind by Second or Third Part of the Convention.

The goal of the Vienna Convention was to set a complex of uniform material legal norms enforceable to the international sales agreements and aimed for the use of the signatory states without appealing to own national regulations on the matter. [2]
