Stewart, 2016-02-05 From 1936 to 1939 the New Deal s Federal Writers Project collected life stories from more than 2 300 former African American slaves These narratives are now widely used as a source to understand the lived experience of those who made the transition from slavery to freedom But in this examination of the project and its legacy Catherine A Stewart shows it was the product of competing visions of the past as ex slaves memories of bondage emancipation and life as freedpeople were used to craft arguments for and against full inclusion of African Americans in society Stewart demonstrates how project administrators such as the folklorist John Lomax white and black interviewers including Zora Neale Hurston and the ex slaves themselves fought to shape understandings of black identity She reveals that some influential project employees were also members of the United Daughters of the Confederacy intent on memorializing the Old South Stewart places ex slaves at the center of debates over black citizenship to illuminate African Americans struggle to redefine their past as well as their future in the

Ethics and Self-Knowledge Peter Lucas, 2011-06-21 This book explores the theoretical basis of our ethical obligations to others as self knowing beings this task being envisaged as an essential supplement to a traditional ethic of respect for persons Authoritative knowledge of others brings with it certain obligations which are reflected in inter alia the moral and legal safeguards designed to ensure that certain information is put out of play for job selection purposes etc However the theoretical basis for such obligations has never been fully clarified This book begins by identifying a distinctive class of interpretive moral wrongs including stereotyping discrimination and objectification It then shows how our obligations in respect of these wrongs can be understood drawing on insights from the tradition of philosophical reflection on recognition The book will be of interest to anyone concerned with the adequacy of a modern ethic of respect for persons particularly in applied and professional ethics
