Social Conflict and Educational Change in England and France 1789-1848 Michalina Vaughan, Margaret Scotford Archer, 2010-06-24 This book analyses the processes of educational change in England and France by relating political social economic and ideological trends to the changing pattern of educational institutions from the time of the Industrial and French revolutions The authors first assess the relevance of major sociological theories for the interpretation of the main trends in education in both countries in the first half of the nineteenth century They then put forward an alternative approach derived from Weber which links educational change with social conflict This theory of domination and assertion of groups competing for control over formal instruction before the emergence of the state system is applied to England and France in this period The main part of the book is devoted to a more detailed analysis of the competing groups in both countries and of their ideologies which served as blueprints for educational reform Social Conflict Dean Pruitt, Sung Hee Kim, 2004 Social Conflict has been the standard bearer for brief sophisticated coverage of all the key research on social conflict and its resolution from a psychological perspective Dealing with interpersonal intergroup interorganizational and international conflict the new edition is thoroughly updated and offers additional content to address recent findings and world events

Social Conflict, Economic Development and Extractive Industry Anthony Bebbington, 2011-09-27 The extraction of minerals oil and gas has a long and ambiguous history in development processes in North America Europe Latin America and Australasia Extraction has yielded wealth regional identities and in some cases capital for industrialization In other cases its main heritages have been social conflict environmental damage and underperforming national economies As the extractive economy has entered another boom period over the last decade not least in Latin America the countries in which this boom is occurring are challenged to interpret this ambiguity Will the extractive industry yield for them economic development or will its main gifts be ones of conflict degradation and unequal forms of growth This book speaks directly to this question and to the different ways in which Latin American countries are responding to the challenge of extractive industry The contributors are a mixture of geographers economists political scientists development experts and anthropologists who all draw on sustained field work in the region By digging deep into both national and local experiences with extractive industry they demonstrate the ways in which it transforms economies societies politics and environments They pay particular attention to the social conflict that extraction consistently produces and they ask how far this conflict might usher in political and institutional changes that could lead to a more productive relationship between extraction and development They also ask whether the existence of left of centre governments in the region changes the relationships between extractive industry and development The book makes clear the immense difficulties that countries and regional societies face in harnessing extractive industry for the collective good For the most part the findings question the wisdom of the development model that many countries in the region have taken up and which emphasises the productive roles of mining and hydrocarbon industries The book should be of interest to students and researchers of Development Studies Geography Politics and Political Economy as well as Anthropology

International Conflict Resolution and Peacebuilding Strategies Daniela Nascimento, 2017-02-17 The analysis and interpretation of conflicts can be a dangerously simplistic exercise A western developed socio economic perspective can simplify conflicts in the so called Third World as the inevitable struggles of people who cannot coexist because of ethnic religious or cultural differences While acknowledging that many contemporary conflicts are characterised and influenced by these factors this book calls for an approach to conflict prevention and resolution which mainly addresses the underlying political economic and social causes The conflict in Sudan where narratives evolved from an interpretation based on religious differences between a Muslim North and the Christian South provides a case study through which the author explores how most prevention and resolution strategies were based on flawed assumptions leading to poor results By focusing instead on the underlying socio economic inequality and marginalisation among groups she analyses the dynamics of the complex peace process to ascertain if and how economic and social rights were effectively included and implemented as a part of the peace agreement including after South Sudan's independence
