Alive And Kicking in New Jersey

Who says small stores are dead? I own a jewelry store in a small New Jersey town – not the part of New Jersey they make jokes about. I write newsletters for my customers. They like them. Maybe you'll like them, too. This special edition was compiled from the 19 four-page newsletters I've written so far.

Close Encounters Of The Canine Kind

One of the most unusual pieces of jewelry I ever sold was a 14 karat gold nameplate for a dog. He was a toy poodle named Munchies. I used a gold bracelet for the chain. Now Munchies proudly wears his name around his neck. Did your heart melt? Ho.

Low Bandwidth Causes Time Out Error

Watch strap keep popping off? It's probably because there is a gap between the watch case lugs and the strap, exposing the pin. Sometimes people get a strap that is the wrong size and sometimes the leather compresses over time.

I'm not exactly sure why this causes watch straps to come off, but a new strap that fits snugly between the case lugs cures it. I can squeeze a slightly too large strap in and it will work, although it looks a little pinched, but too narrow will create problems.

Straps are measured in millimeters. 18-20mm is the usual range for men, with 18mm being the most common. Women's watches usually take from 16-18mm. For a woman's watch with a nameplate strap, I can order a man's short as a replacement.

Of course, the pins come in inches.

Deep Thought

A good deal on a bad diamond is no bargain.

Carats

The carat, the unit of weight for gems, is derived from the carob bean. The carob, or locust tree, grows in the Middle East. In ancient times, merchants found that dried carob beans were very uniform in weight. The modern carat is defined as 200ths of a gram. A dollar bill weighs 1 gram or 5 carats!

Carats

The most unusual engagement ring I ever made was for a woman whose hobby was raising rabbits. She got a ring that looked like a carat: a pear shaped orange sapphire for the carat and 3 small marquis green tsavorite garnets for the leaves. A one carat engagement ring!

Consumer Guide To DIAMONDS

Third Edition

Joseph Mirsky

Joe Spots UFOs

Bring in your unidentified objects and I will identify them as fabulous objects or as fake objects. Who knows, maybe you have something that's out of this world.

Underwear

Victoria's Secret is offering a bra with over 2000 rubies and emeralds, in a rose and leaf pattern, with a 60 carat flawless pear-shaped diamond in the center. Matching panties with rubies, emeralds and diamonds complete the ensemble. Sizes not given. $10 million.

Book Plug

I wrote a book on diamonds. The book offers real-world guidance in purchasing this high-anxiety, ecstatic, and very expensive product, which most people buy at least once in their lives.

The book has 168 pages with 64 through-the-microscope photos and 27 illustrations. Price is $14.95.

Everybody worries far too much about flaws and degrees of whiteness they can't see. They don't worry enough about the one thing they can see: the shine. The cut, the angles and relative sizes of the facets, makes the diamond shine. There's less than a 1° tolerance on the angle that forms the bottom cone of the diamond.

There's a lot about cut in the book because cut is the Next Big Thing in the diamond world. The book will guide you through the thicket of claims about cut and ideal-cut diamonds.

A series of photos shows you how easy it is to spot diamonds for which that bottom angle you just got so worried about is wrong. And those flaws you're still worried about are shown in another series of photos.

There are a lot of bad diamonds out there and somebody has to buy them. Consumer Guide To Diamonds will make sure that somebody isn't you.

Also available from amazon.com and bn.com.

Why Pay Retail?

Because with a couple thousand hours to write it and a couple thousand dollars to print it, I'm entitled to the $14.95.
