The Journal To Stella:

The Journal to Stella Jonathan Swift, 2016-09-01 The history of the publication of the Journal to Stella is somewhat curious On Swift's death twenty five of the letters forming the closing portion of the series fell into the hands of Dr Lyon a clergyman who had been in charge of Swift for some years The letters passed to a man named Wilkes who sold them for publication They accordingly appeared in 1766 in the tenth volume of Dr Hawkesworth's quarto edition of Swift's works but the editor made many changes in the text including a suppression of most of the little language The publishers however fortunately for us were public spirited enough to give the manuscripts with one exception to the British Museum where after many years they were examined by John Forster who printed in his unfinished Life of Swift numerous passages from the originals showing the manner in which the text had been tampered with by Hawkesworth Swift himself too in his later years obliterated many words and sentences in the letters and Forster was able to restore not a few of these omissions His zeal however sometimes led him to make guesses at words which are quite undecipherable Besides Forster's work I have had the benefit of the careful collation made by Mr Ryland for his edition of 1897 Where these authorities differ I have usually found myself in agreement with Mr Ryland but I have felt justified in accepting some of Forster's readings which previously were rejected by him as uncertain and the examination of the manuscripts has enabled me to make some additions and corrections of my own Swift's writing is extremely small and abounds in abbreviations The difficulty of arriving at the true reading is therefore considerable apart from the erasures
