Capital Mobility and Distributional Conflict in Chile, South Korea, and Turkey Kurtuluş Gemici, 2020-05-04 Why did many emerging countries pursue risky financial opening policies in a reckless manner even after the painful example of the Latin American debt crisis Unlike trade liberalization which has mostly been beneficial in emerging countries the removal of capital controls has led to boom bust patterns in many countries It is not simply driven by class or sectoral interests nor is it just a result of ideational changes in policy making circles or international pressure Gemici argues that to fully understand the motivation for these policies we need to take into account distributional struggles prior to their enactment In this book Gemici shows that conflictual distributional relations significantly increase the likelihood of capital account liberalization Through in depth comparative case studies he also demonstrates that countries which liberalize in the most comprehensive manner tend to be the countries characterized by a high degree of distributional conflict The case studies Argentina Chile South Korea and Turkey have been chosen to maximise variation in distributional relations and to escape regional clustering showing quite different trajectories of capital account liberalization This will be of great interest to readers in sociology international political economy and heterodox economics as well as specialists in the countries examined
