The Joy of Grammar James D. McCawley,Diane Brentari,Gary N. Larson,Lynn A. MacLeod,1992-01-01 Two threads run through this collection of 22 papers by students and colleagues of James D McCawley The first is a commitment to deep reflection on the direction of linguistic study sometimes resulting in challenges to the writings of major figures or new appreciations sometimes questioning our assumptions about the organization of linguistic information in the mind The second thread is a shared sense of the requirements for the rigor of a good linguistic argument that its presentation be thoroughgoing straightforward and clearly made There is a strong emphasis on testing the party line with the widest possible range of languages and the strongest possible set of linguistic tests Demonstrating bugs and strategizing over the choice between competing analyses is not enough The completion of an argument lies in constructing a better alternative

The Joy of Science Richard A. Lockshin,2007-11-05 Scientists have great passion What could be more exhilarating than to go to work every day feeling as if you were once again a nine year old called up to the stage to help the magician with his trick To be a researcher is to always be in the position of having the chance to see how the trick works No wonder that many researchers feel that each new day is the most exciting day to be a scientist It therefore is not surprising that scientists have such trouble communicating with non scientists It is difficult for the scientist to understand a life not focused on the desire to understand But the differences are not that Everyone wants to understand that is one of the factors that make us human The difference is more that scientists limit their definition of comprehension to specific rules of logic and evidence These rules apply and are used in everyday life but often with less rigor or restrictions on evidence
