Thirty-Nine Significant Songs :: an Antidote to Despair Christopher Sanderson, 2018-06-18 I was watching the film Suite Fran aise a love story set in wartime It was heavy on emotion and tugged at heartstrings There were good people bad people hurtful people wanton people I was well and truly caught up in the story Then an odd thing happened a moment emerged from the celluloid and spoke to me directly Christopher this is what you should write about about loss and all those who are lost about love and all those who are loved In my morning pages I wrote of this encounter I developed the idea to become a project to write about music To write about that piece which stops you in your tracks or makes you turn your head or makes you say what it is which lies beneath that that I might go deeper I thought of Pablo Neruda s Twenty Love Poems And A Song Of Despair I used to have that book but right now I can t find it I thought it might be the template for this collection of sonnet like poems each etched with the stopping of love and loss More importantly I hope they are loaded with that empty space which I felt to share with the actor who whilst so close to love was also recalling the death of his brothers in the futile war I write this before I know what the other songs will be there may have to be changes such is the magnificence as Patanjali says in discovering a project which both infuses and enthuses you Songs from Scripture James W.
