

father didn't make a prompt decision to flee immediately, then our whole family would surely have met with certain death." Their house was on high ground and her father had seen what looked like little green peas coming up the road at a distance. Elizabeth Choy who, in the scramble to safety, had found herself hiding out in the Singapore General Hospital peeped out of her corner. She recalled, "We saw all the Japanese soldiers marching into the grounds. Oh, we felt as if that was the end of the world. We didn't know what to do."

Fires raged unchecked. Thick clouds of black smoke hung over the city from the burning fuel dumps, darkening the sky. Black clouds of soot fell on those out in the open. Abandoned vehicles cluttered the streets. Those that could still move had to dodge wreckage, bomb craters, bodies, gushing water mains and the other debris of a big city. Some roads were totally blocked. On 15 February, it took the British surrender column nearly two hours to find their way off Port Canning to Bukit Timah Road. The streets were packed with the wounded. Churches and halls were turned into makeshift hospitals. Nurses, doctors and auxiliary workers struggled to cope with an increasing flood of victims.

Despite the smell of death and noise of battle, some remembered that it was the day of the Chinese New Year. On Amber Road, the Lee's family wanted to celebrate the day. Lee Kip Lin, "(T)he cook and the servant decided that they should, of course, celebrate Chinese New Year. So my father said 'All right if you feel you want to go ahead.' They took the chicken from the coop but for some strange reason, at the moment, they decided not to. And just as well, because on that very day a shell landed and blew the kitchen up."

Herman de Souza who was holed up with his men at the junction of Whitley and Bras Basah Roads saw a car coming down Bukit Timah Road with a big white flag. He as it looked to him, a British surrender was in progress. Another Eurasian, Cleaver Rowell Eber, recalled, "We had certain areas to guard. I think in fact, all of Newton Circus right up to the Ford Motor Company, the 1st Battalion had to hold that area. We were at our posts day and night until the 15th February. On that day, before the signal went up that we had surrendered, my Second-in-Command came and told me to accompany him."

A Japanese magazine picture of some British troops being taken captive. The British army made constant retreats and withdrawals and many soldiers appeared unwilling to fight, leaving a poor impression in the eyes of local people.

Ferguson,2012-10-23 Excerpted from Niall Ferguson s sprawling bestseller The War of the World The Abyss now stands on its own as one of the most thrilling short histories of World War I ever written This is not a conventional military history about battles and generals Rather The Abyss examines how World War I saw the birth of total war fought between societies as much as armies and must therefore be understood in terms of the financial crises it unleashed the multinational empires it destroyed and the hateful ideas it propagated The most remarkable thing about the war Ferguson shows us is how shockingly unexpected it was At a time when economic integration and technology seemed to be rendering war between great powers impossible World War I was the moment when that process went into reverse and the lethal forces of ethnic disintegration took over Now on the cusp of the 100th anniversary of its outbreak we can see World War I as much more than just four years of industrialized slaughter Weaving together the economics of empire and the ideology of race and featuring an original preface by the author as well a teaser from his new paperback Civilization The Abyss is world history at its finest

Soldiers and Diplomacy in Burma Renaud Egreteau,Larry Jagan,2013-06-10 Soldiers and Diplomacy addresses the key question of the ongoing role of the military in Burma s foreign policy The authors a political scientist and a former top Asia editor for the BBC provide a fresh perspective on Burma s foreign and security policies which have shifted between pro active diplomacies of neutralism and non alignment and autarkical policies of isolation and xenophobic nationalism They argue that important elements of continuity underlie Burma s striking postcolonial policy changes and contrasting diplomatic practices Among the defining factors here are the formidable dominance of the Burmese armed forces over state structure the enduring domestic political conundrum and the peculiar geography of a country located at the crossroads of India China and Southeast Asia Egreteau and Jagan argue that the Burmese military still has the tools needed to retain their praetorian influence over the country's foreign policy in the post junta context of the 2010s For international policymakers potential foreign investors and Burma's immediate neighbors this will have strong implications in terms of the country's foreign policy approach
