

THE JOURNAL OF ARTHUR STIRLING

By
UPTON SINCLAIR

First given to the world as a genuine document, "The Journal of Arthur Stirling" was the literary sensation of the year 1903. Richard Le Gallienne described it as follows:

"At once an authoritative document, a heart-searching appeal, and a tragic entertainment, I don't remember to have seen the old case of the 'poet versus The World' put with more truth, more vehemence, and more charm. . . . I have given little notion of the freshness and vigor, the wit and beauty, the attractive humanity of 'The Journal of Arthur Stirling,' but I hope the reader may be sufficiently interested by what I have said to make acquaintance with the book for himself. In the weary waste of clever imitation books it is an oasis of originality indeed."
