are classified as SIS and are an integral part of the rural Bangladeshi diet. As many SIS are eaten whole with organs and bones they contain high amounts of vitamins and minerals including calcium and iron and zinc. Some SIS such as mola are also rich in vitamin A. SIS are often cooked with vegetables and a little oil so they contribute to the food diversity of the rural poor. SIS are recognized as a major animal source food group contributing to improved food and nutrition security and livelihoods of the people of South and Southeast Asia. The purpose of this workshop is to bring together policy makers, extension agents, researchers, non-governmental and development organizations to share knowledge about small fish, their contribution to better nutrition, production technologies and strategies for wider dissemination of pond culture and wetland based production and conservation technologies. The workshop is expected to generate ideas for further research and development of sustainable technologies for production, management and conservation of SIS for the benefit of the people of Bangladesh as well as the South and Southeast Asian region.

Freshwater small pelagic fish and their fisheries in the major African lakes and reservoirs in relation to food security and nutrition Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2019-02-01. Small pelagic fish species found in lakes and introduced to reservoirs dominate by volume and contribute some of the most important inland fisheries in Africa with steadily increasing catches and additional potential. This circular reviews the status and importance of the pelagic fish and fisheries together with small fish in general for sustainable and healthy livelihoods in Africa. It reviews the biology and biological production of the most important pelagic species in lakes and reservoirs as well as the impacts of environmental and climatic variation on the stocks of these species. It examines and discusses the various capture techniques together with potential of improvements in the fisheries and associated processing and national and regional trade within Africa. The knowledge generated by the circular will be useful for policy makers and development practitioners to design and implement more effective policies, strategies and programs that will contribute to reducing the food insecurity and conflicts that currently affect the people in sub-Saharan Africa.
