Teach the Nation Anne-Elizabeth Murdy, 2018-10-24 Is knowledge power In Teach the Nation Anne Elizabeth Murdy explores the history and contradictions in the notion that education and literacy are vital means for improving social and political status in the US By closely examining the rapidly shifting social context of education and the emerging literature by and for African American women during the 1890s Murdy proves that the histories of education and literature are deeply connected and argues that their current lives must be regarded as mutually dependent Teach the Nation offers a new understanding of literacy and pedagogical study and identifies how literary history enhances current feminist and anti racist teachings By excavating notions about education in the 1890s as turbulent a time for American public education as today Murdy asks readers to step back from this historical moment to better understand the contexts and institutions within which we theorize learning and teaching In doing so she compels readers to reimagine the potential for gaining social power through education and literature

Contesting the Past, Reconstructing the Nation Ben Railton, 2007-09-30 In this study of Gilded Age literature and culture Ben Railton proposes that in the years after Reconstruction America's identity was often connected through distinct and competing conceptions of the nation's history Concerned with key social questions such as race Native Americans women and the South Contesting the Past Reconstructing the Nation provided close readings of a number of texts for the ways they highlight these issues This book examines established classics newer additions to the canon largely forgotten best sellers recovery gems and autobiographical works by Douglass and Truth poems by Harper and Piatt and short stories by Woolson and Cooke These readings contribute to ongoing conversations over historical literature's definition and value and a greater understanding of not only American society in the Gilded Age but also debates on our shared but contested history that remain very much alive in the present From publisher's description

Repositioning Feminism & Education Janice Jipson, 1995-08-22 This book presents testimony of feminisms in process The accounts are filled with tensions not least an uneasiness with feminism itself and the question of what exactly it means to be a feminist in education in the contemporary world It is their respect for their own differences and the honesty with which they write that makes this such a rich text From the Foreword by Kathleen Weiler Educators committed to social change face the common dilemma of how to take up the work of transformation without reinscribing systems of domination The struggle with the concept of imposition is central to the emergence of many educators' identities and provides a site for exploring the complex relationship between power knowledge and teacher identity This book chronicles the collaborative efforts of five diverse women educators Native American European Jewish American rural midwestern working class to grapple with the tensions of taking up a political position while honoring the cultural social and historical context of others Their dialogue across feminist critical and postmodern theories and practices explores the process of fusing theory with political work in the world What emerges is the continual repositioning and disruption of taken for granted meanings as central to enhancing emancipatory education
