Qupai in Chinese Music Alan R Thrasher, 2016-03-31 Presenting the latest research in the area this volume explores the fundamental concept of gupai melodic models upon which most traditional Chinese instrumental music and some vocal music is based. The greater part of the traditional instrumental repertoire has emerged from gupai models by way of well established variation techniques. These melodies and techniques are alive today and still performed in silk bamboo types of ensemble music zheng pipa and other solo traditions all opera types narrative songs and Buddhist and Daoist ritual music With a view toward explaining gupai as a musical system contributors explore the concept from multiple directions notably its historic development patterns of structural organization compositional usage in Kungu classical opera influence on the growth of traditional ensemble and solo repertoires and indeed on 19th century European music as well Related essays examine the use of shan ge folksongs as gupai models in one local opera tradition and the controversial relationship between gupai forms and the metrically organized bangiang forms of organization in Beijing opera. The final three essays are focused upon traditional suite forms in which gupai and non gupai tunes are mixed examples drawn from the Minnan nanguan repertoire Jiangnan silk bamboo tradition and the ritual music of North China This is the first Western language study on the nature and background of the gupai tradition and the methods by which model melodies have been varied in creation of repertoire The volume is essential reading for East Asian music specialists and contributes to the fields of ethnomusicology musicology music theory music composition and Chinese music and performing arts Xun Xu and the Politics of Precision in Third-Century AD China Howard L.
