Sorcellerie et justice criminelle Alfred Soman, 2024-10-28 The Parlement of Paris was the largest secular court in Christendom. Although its criminal archives have been preserved virtually intact, historians of the period of the great witch trials as well as scholars of the Ancien Régime in general have been discouraged by the notorious difficulties of research into them and have effectively avoided these records. Alfred Soman was the first historian to have undertaken the task. In the fifteen articles republished here which include both detailed investigations of particular cases and broad ranging overviews, he contends that criminal justice in the 16th and 17th century France was far more humane and less severe than traditional assumptions would suggest. As early as 1588 the High Court began to take steps to restrain indiscriminate witch hunting, particularly in the eastern provinces where prosecutions were instigated not in conformity with but in defiance of the highest judicial authority in the land. Le Parlement de Paris la plus grande cour de justice de l'Occident nous a laissé ses archives criminelles quasiment intactes. Pourtant les historiens des procès de sorcellerie ainsi que les spécialistes des aspects institutionnels et sociaux de l'Ancien Régime découragés par les difficultés notoires de la recherche ont vu l'exploitation de ces documents. Alfred Soman est le premier chercheur en avoir relevé. Dans cette série de quinze articles qui comprennent des enquêtes détaillées ainsi que des essais de synthèse, il soutient que l'ancienne justice était beaucoup plus clémente et moins injuste que de vieilles idées reçues ne le prétendent. Dès 1588 la Haute Cour commença à primer les nombreuses poursuites pour faits de sorcellerie plus particulièrement dans l'Est du royaume où certains siéges subalternes entamaient des actions criminelles intempestives prenant le contre-pied de la politique mise en place par le Pouvoir judiciaire central. The

Limits of Absolutism in ancien régime France Richard Bonney, 2024-10-28 This selection of articles is organized around three broad themes: the nature of the governing system in France; Absolutism; the political crisis of the mid 17th century, the Fronde; and the development of royal finance. The author first considers the growth of the French state in its ideological and institutional aspects, then the opposition such developments provoked, much centred on the figure of Cardinal Mazarin. In the last section, particular attention is given to fiscal history, including a comparison of mid 18th century France with the other states of Europe. Professor Bonney would argue that the fiscal imperative, the increased requirements posed by the costs of war and the long term consequences of fiscal growth, may be seen as one of the decisive factors in the development of the modern state. Legal Scholarship and Doctrines of Private Law, 13th-18th centuries Robert Feenstra, 2024-10-28 The emphasis in this present volume of Professor Feenstra's studies lies on the post-medieval development of legal scholarship. The opening two studies are concerned with the University of Orléans in the 13th-14th centuries, but from there the centre of interest shifts to the early modern Netherlands. Two important themes are the teaching of law, especially at the legal faculties of Leyden and Franeker, and the doctrines of private law, especially property, contract and succession. The figure of Hugo Grotius, his sources and his influence dominate these articles. Early Modern European Society Henry
