Social and Economic Change in the Pamirs (Gorno-Badakhshan, Tajikistan) Frank Bliss, 2006

Social and Economic Change in the Pamirs (Gorno-Badakhshan, Tajikistan) Frank Bliss, 2006-05-02 Since Olufsen and Schulz published their monographs on the Pamirs in 1904 and 1914 respectively this is the first book to deal with the history anthropology and recent social and economic development of the Pamiri people in Gorno Badakhshan Eastern Tajikistan After the collapse of the Soviet Union such high mountain areas were more or less forgotten and people would have suffered severely from their isolation if an Aga Khan Foundation project in 1993 to 1994 had not afforded broader support The reader will be confronted by an almost surrealistic world Pamiri income and living conditions after 1991 dropped to the level of a poor Sahelian country Former scientists university professors and engineers found themselves using ox ploughs to plant potatoes and wheat for survival On the other hand 100% literacy and excellent skills proved to be an enormous human capital resource for economic recovery The first sign of this was an increase in agricultural production something that had never occurred during Soviet times

Mapping Transition in the Pamirs Hermann Kreutzmann, Teiji Watanabe, 2016-01-25 By emphasizing on the Pamir region a comprehensive overview of path dependent and recent developments in a remote mountain region is provided in this book Overall neglect in the mountainous periphery is contrasted by shifting the centre of attention to the Pamirs situated at the interface between South and Central Asia From colonial times to now there has been a debate on grasping and locating the area Here field work based contributions are collected to provide a variety of perspectives on the Pamirs highlighting transformation and transition in Post Soviet societies as well as in Afghanistan and Pakistan The similar ecological environment across borders features the common ground while analyzing development processes in a set of case studies that aim at highlighting certain aspects of regional development

China's Borderlands Steven Parham, 2017-02-27 This region which marks the meeting of China and post Soviet Central Asia is increasingly important militarily economically and geographically Yet we know little of the people that live there beyond a romanticised Silk Road sense of fraternity In fact relations between the people of this region are tense and border violence is escalating even as the identity and nationality of the people on the ground shifts to meet their new geopolitical realities As Steven Parham shows many of the world's Soviet borders have proved to be deeply unstable and in the end impermanent Meanwhile the looming presence of Modern China and Russia who are funneling money and military resources into the region partly to fight what they see as a growing Islamic activism are adding fuel to the fire This lyrical intelligent book functions as part travelogue part sociological exploration and is based on a unique body of research five months trekking through the checkpoints of the border regions As China continues to grow and become more assertive as it has been recently in Africa and in the South China Seas as well as in Xinjiang China's borderlands have become a battleground between the Soviet past and the Chinese future

Everyday Energy Politics in Central Asia and the Caucasus David Gullette, Jeanne Féaux de la Croix, 2017-10-02 The perception of Central Asia and its place in the world has come to be shaped by its large oil and gas reserves Literature on energy in the region has thus largely focused on related geopolitical issues and national policies However little is known about citizens' needs within this broader context of commodities that connect the energy networks of China Russia and the West This multidisciplinary special issue brings together anthropologists economists geographers and political scientists to examine the role of all forms of energy here oil gas hydropower and solar power and their products especially electricity in people's daily lives throughout Central Asia and the Caucasus The papers in this issue ask how energy is understood as an everyday resource as a necessity and a source of opportunity a challenge or even as an indicator of exclusionary practices We enquire into the role and views of energy sector workers rural consumers and urban communities and their experiences of energy companies and national policies We further examine the legacy of Soviet and more recent domestic energy policies the environmental impact of energy use as well as the political impact of citizens' energy grievances This book was published as a special issue of Central Asian Survey

Blind Spot Salmaan Keshavjee, 2014-08-16 Neoliberalism has been the defining paradigm in global health since the latter part of the twentieth century What started as an untested and unproven theory that the creation of unfettered markets would give rise to political democracy led to policies that promoted the belief that private markets were the optimal agents for the distribution of social goods including health care A vivid illustration of the infiltration of neoliberal ideology into the design and implementation of development programs this case study set in post Soviet Tajikistan's remote eastern province of Badakhshan draws on extensive ethnographic and historical material to examine a revolving drug fund program used by numerous nongovernmental organizations globally to address shortages of high quality pharmaceuticals in poor communities Provocative rigorous and accessible Blind Spot offers a cautionary tale about the forces driving decision making in health and development policy today illustrating how the privatization of health care can have catastrophic outcomes for some of the world's most vulnerable populations

Critical Approaches to Security in Central Asia Edward Lemon, 2020-05-21 Central Asia remains on the periphery both spatially and in people's imaginations When the region does attract international attention it is often related to security issues including terrorism ethnic conflict and drug trafficking This book brings together leading specialists from a range of disciplines including geography anthropology sociology and political science to discuss how citizens and governments within Central Asia think about and practise security The authors explore how governments use fears of instability to bolster their rule and how securitized populations cope with and resist being labelled threats through strategies that are rarely associated with security including marriage and changing their appearance This collection examines a wide range of security issues including Islamic extremism small arms interethnic relations and border regions While coverage of the region often departs from preconceived notions of the region as dangerous obscure and volatile the chapters in this book all place emphasis on the way local people understand security and harmony in their daily lives This book will be of interest to students and researchers of Central Asian Studies as well as Security Studies and Political Science The chapters were originally published in the journal Central Asian Survey

Isma'ili Modern Jonah Steinberg, 2011-01-17 The Isma'ili Muslims a major sect of Shi'i Islam form a community that is intriguing in its deterritorialized social organization Informed by the richness of Isma'ili history theories of transnationalism and globalization and firsthand ethnographic fieldwork in the Himalayan regions of Tajikistan and Pakistan as well as in Europe Jonah Steinberg investigates Isma'ili Muslims and the development of their remarkable and expansive twenty first century global structures Led by a charismatic European based hereditary Imam Prince Karim Aga Khan IV global Isma'ili organizations make available an astonishing array of services social economic political and religious to some three to five million subjects stretching from Afghanistan to England from Pakistan to Tanzania Steinberg argues that this intricate and highly integrated network enables a new kind of shared identity and citizenship one that goes well beyond the sense of community maintained by other diasporic populations Of note in this process is the rapid assimilation in the postcolonial period of once isolated societies into the intensively centralized Isma'ili structure Also remarkable is the Isma'ilis self presentation contrary to common characterizations of Islam in the mass media as a Muslim society that is broadly sympathetic to capitalist systems opposed to fundamentalism and distinctly modern in orientation Steinberg's unique journey into remote mountain regions highlights today's rapidly shifting meanings of citizenship faith and identity and reveals their
