

For many generations, families of mice have made their homes in the roots and trunks of the trees of Brambly Hedge, a dense and tangled hedgeway that borders the field on the other side of the stream.

During the fine weather, the mice collect flowers, fruit, berries and nuts from the hedge and surrounding fields. In the hot summer, they gather by the stream, dangling their paws and tails in the clear water.

And as the autumn arrives, the mice prepare delicious jams, pickles and preserves that are kept safely in the Store Stump for the winter months ahead.

In every season, there is always a birthday, special occasion or important tradition to celebrate, and these events always bring the community of mice together.
