Urban Challenges in Spain and Portugal Nuria Benach, Andrés Walliser, 2016-03-16 Contemporary cities in the Iberian Peninsula have gone through a period of dramatic changes during the last decade A period of upward economic indicators and massive urbanization was followed by a tremendous financial crash in 2007 that sank Spanish and Portuguese societies into a profound crisis That period of massive urbanization has been explained by several factors the availability of financial capital that was speculatively invested in real estate a rather sympathetic land use regulation and the real or perceived social mobility by most social groups which included housing acquisition enabled by unusual credit facilities In this book we aim to show several different aspects of this process both in Portugal and Spanish cities problematizing the economic and social consequences of such a model of urban and economic growth and also presenting some policy and governance outcomes that took place along the last decade This book was published as a special issue of Urban Research and Practice

Creative Economies in Post-Industrial Cities Myrna Margulies Breitbart, 2016-05-13 There has been much written on the new creative economy but most work focuses on the so called creative class with lifestyle preferences that favor trendy new restaurants mountain biking and late night clubbing This creative class flagship cultural destinations and other forms of commodity driven cultural production now occupy a relatively uncritical place in the revitalization schemes of most cities up and down the urban hierarchy In contrast this book focuses on small to medium size post industrial cities in the US Canada and Europe that are trying to redress the effects of deindustrialization and economic decline through cultural economic regeneration It examines how culture infused economic opportunities are being incorporated into planning in distinct ways largely under the radar in many working class communities and considers to what extent places rooted in an industrial past are able to envisage a different economic future for themselves It questions whether these visions replicate strategies employed in larger cities or put forth plans that better suit the unique histories and challenges of places that remain outside the global limelight Exploring the intersection between a cultural and sustainable economy raises issues that are central to how urban regeneration is approached and neighborhood needs and assets are understood Case studies in this book examine spaces and planning processes that hold the possibility of addressing inequality by forging new economic and social relationships and by embarking on more inclusive and collaborative experiments in culture based economic development These examples often focus on building upon the assets of existing residents and broadly define creativity and talent They also acknowledge both the economic and non monetary value of cultural practices This book maintains a critical edge incorporating left critiques of mainstream creative economy theories and practices into empirical case studies that depart from standard cultural economy discourse. Structural barriers and unequal distributions of power make the search for viable urban development alternatives especially difficult for smaller post industrial cities and risk derailing even creative grassroots initiatives. While acknowledging these obstacles, this book moves beyond critique and focuses on how the growing economy surrounding culture, the arts, and ecological design can be harnessed and transformed to best benefit such cities and improve the quality of life for its residents.

Phoenix cities Power, Anne, Plöger, Jörg, 2010-03-16. Weak market cities across Europe and America or core cities as they were in their heyday went from being industrial giants dominating their national and eventually the global economy to being devastation zones. In a single generation, three quarters of all manufacturing jobs disappeared, leaving dislocated, impoverished communities, run down city centres, and a massive population exodus. So how did Europeans react? And how different was their response from America's? This book looks closely at the recovery trajectories of seven European cities from very different regions of the EU. Their dramatic decline, intense recovery efforts, and actual progress on the ground underline the significance of public underpinning in times of crisis. Innovative enterprises, new style city leadership, special neighbourhood programmes, and skills development are all explored. The American experience, where cities were largely left to their own devices, produced a slower, more uncertain recovery trajectory. This book will provide much that is original and promising to all those wanting to understand the ground level realities of urban change and progress.

Gender in the Post-Fordist Urban Marguerite van den Berg, 2017-03-02. This book investigates the gender revolution in urban planning and public policy. Building on feminist urban studies, it introduces the concept of genderfication as a means of understanding the consequences of post-Fordist gender notions for the city. It traces the changes in western urban gender relations, arguing that in the post-Fordist urban landscape, gender is used for urban planning and public policy both to rebrand a city's image and to produce space for gender equality, often at the cost of precarious urban populations. This is a topic that remains largely unexplored in critical urban studies and radical geography. Chapters cover how Jane Jacobs' perspectives provide an alternative to the patriarchal, modernist city for contemporary planners, and using Rotterdam as a case study. Van Den Berg discusses why new urban planning methods focus on attracting women and children as new urbanites Topics include forms of place marketing gender as a repertoire for contemporary urban Imageneering and the concept of urban re generation The final chapter investigates how cities aiming to redefine themselves imagine future populations and how they design social policies that explicitly and particularly target women as mothers Scholars in all fields of urban studies will find this work thought provoking instructive and informative Governing European Cities Hans Andersen,2019-07-11 This title was first published in 2001 This volume is a result of the action COST A9 Civitas Transformation of European Cities and Urban Governance launched in 1995 which looks at the emergence of the urban question The COST framework is a European mechanism to provide scientific and technical assistance for national research programmes The text covers the change in the importance of European cities and analyzes how each city re formulates its policies and methods of governing in response to these changes This text is to analyze the new forms of urban governance using three points of view a statistical approach an economic approach and a sociological approach This book tackles the fragmentation and social exclusion that occurs in urban society and explores the different forms it takes throughout Europe It also presents some strategies to combat or at least regulate this fragmentation to ensure a united European city Place-making and Urban Development Pier Carlo Palermo,Davide

Ponzini,2014-12-05 The regeneration of critical urban areas through the redesign of public space with the intense involvement of local communities seems to be the central focus of place making according to some widespread practices in academic and professional circles Recently new expertise maintains that place making could be an innovative and potentially autonomous field competing with more traditional disciplines like urban planning urban design architecture and others This book affirms that the question of making better places for people should be understood in a broader sense as a symptom of the non contingent limitations of the urban and spatial disciplines It maintains that research should not be oriented only towards new technical or merely formal solutions but rather towards the profound rethinking of disciplinary paradigms In the fields of urban planning urban design and policy making the challenge of place making provides scholars and practitioners a great opportunity for a much needed critical review Only the substantial reappraisal of long standing technical cultural institutional and social premises and perspectives can truly improve place making practices The pressing need for place making implies trespassing undue disciplinary boundaries and experimenting a place based approach that can innovate and integrate planning regulations strategic spatial visioning and urban development projects Moreover the place making challenge compels urban experts and policy makers to critically reflect upon the physical and social contexts of their interventions In this sense facing place making today is a way to renew the civic and social role of urban planning and urban design Urban Regeneration in the UK Andrew Tallon,2020-11-24 This textbook provides an accessible and critical synthesis of urban regeneration in the UK incorporating key policies approaches issues debates and case studies The central objective of the textbook is to place the historical and contemporary regeneration agenda in context Section I sets up the
