

THE ADVENTURES OF

sayst he, Friday, what you tell me, you wishd you were dead! You say, sayst he, which are both true, we wish Friday were, we cannot stay. In a word, he would not think of going there without me! I go there! Friday (sayst he), what shall I do there? He cannot say quick upon me; then You do great deal more good, sayst he; you teach wild men to good rather than make them; you tell them know God, pray God, and live a new life. Alas! Friday (sayst he), there knowest more what thou sayest; I am but an ignorant man myself. Yes, you, sayst he, you teach me good, you teach me more good. No, no, Friday (sayst he), you shall go without me; I have not been so long by myself, as I did before. He lookt well enough again at that word, and running to one of the boats which he used to row, he took care to get himself, clothes and gun, &c. on. What must I do with this? says I to him. But still I found a strong inclination to my attempting an escape as above, founded on the expectation gathered from the discourse, viz. that there were several hundred men there; and therefore, without any more delay, I went to work with Friday to find out a good new proper vessel, and make a large quantity of cotton to undertake the voyage. There was not enough in the island to have built a little boat, much less a proper and common, but even of good large vessels. But the main thing I looked at, was to get one so near the water that we might launch it where it
