

A close-up photograph of a person wearing a dark navy blue suit jacket, a white dress shirt, and a blue tie with a small white dot pattern. The person is holding a plain white rectangular sign in front of their chest with both hands. The sign has the words "CAREER" and "COUNSELING" printed in a bold, black, sans-serif font, stacked vertically. The background is a blurred, light-colored interior space.

The Career Counselor Leslie L. Parrott, Les Parrott, 1995

Career Counseling Larry Cochran, 1997-04-08 For decades scholars and professionals have been attracted to theories offering a deeper view of career but have been frustrated by difficulties in translating theories of meaning making development and identity into viable practice At the same time there has been growing disenchantment with impersonal techniques of matching an individual's traits with skills required for a specific vocation While personality traits and talents may help to predict a predisposition to a career type this method of analysis neglects the influences of human purpose passion and life history In Career Counseling author Larry Cochran fills the void by introducing the theory of narrative construction a method of counseling that injects personal identity into career development in a practical way Cochran demonstrates how literary models and constructivist methods can be used in career development to provide the essential subjective dimension that has been lacking in practical counseling In addition he provides the innovative materials that are necessary for making this process both efficient and effective Contributing a unique and important perspective and approach to career counseling this volume will be widely used by scholars and professionals in the fields of career counseling clinical counseling psychology social psychology and management
