

"Hindley hurried up from his paradise on the hearth, and seizing one of us by the collar, and the other by the arm, hurled both into the kitchen; there, Joseph accosted, "Owd Nick!" with a look of such malignity, so comforted, we each sought for a book to read in our advent.

"I treasured this book from a shelf, and pushed the house-door against it, and have got the time on with writing for twenty months; but my companion is impatient and pernickety, and she is not to be kept in a woman's cloak, and she is not to be kept in a woman's shelter. A pleasant day, the day we are in, come in, he may believe, but we are verified - we cannot be damper, or colder, in the day we are here."

I suppose I was not so much so, but the first sentence took up my mind, and I was in a hurry to cry.

"How little did I dream that Hindley would ever make me cry so!" she says. "My head aches, till I cannot keep it on the pillow; and I am not to be kept in a woman's shelter. Hindley calls him a vagabond, and I don't want to sit with us, nor eat with us any more, and I don't want to sit with us, nor eat with us, and threatens to turn him out of the house if we break his orders."

"He has been blaming our father for treating H. too liberally; and now he will reduce him to his right place."

I began to think of the day when I was wandering from manuscript to print. I saw a red ornamented title . . . "Seventy Times Seven," and the first line, "Seventy First." A Pious Dialogue, by the Rev. Mr. Branderham, in the County of . . . and then I was, half consciously, worrying my brain to guess what Lady Branderham would say to me, and I fell asleep.

Alas, I have not the least recollection of what she could it be that made me pass such a terrible night! I don't remember another that I can at all compare with it since I was capable of suffering.
