

A Philosophical Exploration of Symbolism and Meaning in Modern Artistic Practices

By Wanying Han

Author Biography

Wanying Han is a senior at Sage Hill High School in California. She is passionate about the interplay between philosophy and art. With a strong interest in understanding how contemporary artistic practices approach and advance intricate philosophical concepts, she aspires to investigate further the theoretical underpinnings of artistic styles and cultural influences. Besides academic endeavors, She also enjoys exploring the motifs of identity, self-expression, and existential anxiety through artwork.

Abstract

This paper explores the intricate relationship between art and philosophy, aiming to understand how contemporary artistic practices approach and convey philosophical ideas like identity, human existence, and cultural introspection through symbolism and meaning. Employing the case study approach to research, it analyzes the themes of identity and self-expression in Frida Kahlo's The Two Fridas (1939) and the motifs of existential anxiety and alienation in Edvard Munch's The Scream (1893). The study findings demonstrate the significant role of art as a personal and philosophical means of exploring, conceptualizing, and expressing intricate abstract ideas in a tactile form. Thus, art and philosophy are deeply intertwined, with the former serving as a valuable medium for amplifying the abstract themes of the latter more compellingly. Discourses on the subject matter may benefit from further mixed-methods studies exploring potential interdisciplinary approaches for fostering the working relationship between two disciplines to generate valuable insight for fostering philosophy's continued inspiration of modern art to sustainably challenge societal perceptions, practices, and human experiences.

Keywords: art, philosophy, contemporary art, self-expression, identity, Frida Kahlo, the Two Fridas, Edvard Munch, The Scream.
