African Indigenous Religions and Disease Causation David Westerlund, 2006-10-01 This comparative and historical study focuses on religious aspects of disease etiologies among five systematically selected African peoples the San Maasai Sukuma Kongo and Yoruba Unlike the homogenizing tendencies of many earlier comparative works by scholars of religion this book highlights the differences between and the plurality within the religions and cultures of the selected peoples as well as processes of change The work covers a period of about 100 years from the late 19th to the late 20th century and much of the material used comes from European mission archives To different degrees among the peoples studied there has been a gradual shift from an emphasis on spiritual beings such as God and ancestors to living humans like witches as agents of disease In a theoretically eclectic analysis possible reasons for this shift are discussed Habitat, Economy and Society

C. Daryll Forde, 2013-11-05 An introduction to the ethnography and human geography of non European peoples this book deals with the economic and social life of a number of groups at diverse levels of cultural achievement and in different regions of the world International in its scope the book covers Malaysia Africa North America Canada Siberia the Amazon Eastern Solomon Islands India Central Asia and the Middle East Originally published in 1934 This re issues the seventh edition of 1949 One Health: The Human-Animal-Environment Interfaces in Emerging Infectious Diseases John

S. Mackenzie, Martyn Jeggo, Peter Daszak, Juergen A. Richt, 2013-11-22 One Health is an emerging concept that aims to bring together human animal and environmental health Achieving harmonized approaches for disease detection and prevention is difficult because traditional boundaries of medical and veterinary practice must be crossed In the 19th and early 20th centuries this was not the case then researchers like Louis Pasteur and Robert Koch and physicians like William Osler and Rudolph Virchow crossed the boundaries between animal and human health More recently Calvin Schwabe revised the concept of One Medicine This was critical for the advancement of the field of epidemiology especially as applied to zoonotic diseases The future of One Health is at a crossroads with a need to more clearly define its boundaries and demonstrate its benefits Interestingly the greatest acceptance of One Health is seen in the developing world where it is having significant impacts on control of infectious diseases Myths and Legends Philip Wilkinson, 2009-06-15 Myths and legends are deeply

Pastoralists at the Periphery Claudia Chang, Harold Albert Koster, 1994-05 A Baluch tribesman follows his goats as they search for a bit of vegetation a Turkana youth guards his father's cattle against theft by raiders These pastoral inhabitants of mountain and desert waste are considered to be among the most geographically economically and politically peripheral of peoples yet they are not entirely isolated from broader sociopolitical and economic forces The lives of modern pastoralists are greatly affected by the policies of nations and the demands of world markets They may face military control forced settlement stock reduction programs or even efforts at development by governments claiming sovereignty over the lands they roam The authors of this collection of essays examine the impact of capitalism on nineteenth and early twentieth century pastoralists and discuss the historical transformations that have occurred in the lives and societies of herding peoples around the world They argue that pastoralists were not simply passive recipients of change imposed by capitalist politics and that historical and economic factors impinging on their societies were as important as ecological ones Collectively these papers demonstrate that twentieth century pastoralists and their nineteenth century predecessors should not be seen as immutably locked in a pastoral mode of production but rather as actively negotiating encounters between themselves and the expanding power of capitalist states
